The foreman wrote over it in Duty of Congress," and put it on old man Lawton's hook. I think his name adjusted his spectacles and began sticking type. The other printers watched him for a few minutes, but beyond a muttered oath or two he gave no sign. Lawton went on setting type until about half-way through the "copy." Then he was stuck. He took the copy over to the foreman and

"Jack, what is that word ?"

"I don't know," replied the foreman. "You know I never could read the stuff." Lawton took the sheet down to Greeley and pointed out to him a particularly awful scrawl of the rooster's foot, asking what word that was Greeley looked at it a moment and replied with a frown: "Unconstitutional, of course."

Lawton went back to the composing room and finished his task with the utter sang froid. The old man never knew how the "copy" was produced.

Personal Sarcasm Don't Pay.

There is a great temptation to people somewhat gifted in that direction to indulge in sarcasm; and it sometimes requires considerable determination to resist doing it, but as a general rule it doesn't pay.

When I first entered good old Dartmouth college I was appointed to represent our class in a debate with a member of each of the other classes, and the junior opposing disputant thought he would (and did) make considerable laughter at our expense by quoting Milton's "Paradise Lost." He finally closed by saying that "for an 25c for 17c. angel, I had accomplished very little in the way of argument.'

I brought down the house with cheers by simply replying that "I believed I had ed, light or dark colors, at 124c yard. accomplished one thing that had never history of the world, and that was when an angel opened the mouth of Balaam's ass." Dr. Johnson Vanquished.

Dr. Johnson's tongue spared nobody, and naturally enough if anyone even got the better of him in a verbal encounter it was considered a memorable victory. In this spirit a Scotch fam ly cherishes an anecdote of his trip to Scotland. He had stopped at the house for a meal, and was held to the national dish.

"Dr. Johnson, what do you think of our Scotch broth?"

"Madam," was the answer, "in my opinion it is only fit for pigs." "Then have some more," said the wo-
