THE WITNESS'S POSITION. A reference in the Witness to the protection sentiment of Mr. Bertram, and to the inadvisability of an election success that might be construed into an isolated difference with the government on its trade policy, was made very much use of by the tory papers in Toronto during the campaingn. The Witness, indeed, was very much in evidence, and a meaning and importance were given to its remarks, which, perhaps, it never intimated. But if an isolated paragraph, before an election, is of so much value, a more deliberate of greater velue. Hence we append the Witness's editorial comparison of the candidates in the recent fight:

"The liberal candidate is a prosperous business man belonging to the constituency which he carried, and is deservedly When pited against Mr. Howland, whose personal and family influence is justly considerable, it is doubtful whether the liberal candidate was stronger than was Mr. Lount when confronted by Mr. Cockburn. terday's battle as compared with that of the twenty third of June, 1896, lay undoubtsence of feeling over the Manitoba school question. I esterday s victory for the liberals is, therefore, a bigger and a more in Canala. It was apparently hardly less Yamaska. The government has, on the whole, deserved well of the people of Canada. It has certainly done splendid service Being the Largest Deposit Made by in the matter of the Manitoba school trouble, in improving the relations of Canada and the mother country, in creating confidence in the future of the dominion, and in encouraging enterprise, while reducing more important in the eyes of the world. Prosperity is actual, is growing, and the prospects are brighter than ever before in the history of the dominion. It is seldom, under such circumstances and conditions, that a government loses in a bye election, even in a stronghold of the opposition."

It is pointed out by an independent paper that the government usually wins in bye-elections. The liberals won when the party was in opposition, and there is no HON. GEO. A Cox.
