DISPENSING OF LIQUOR.

The legislature has before it the petition of many druggists in Ontario, who pray that the regulations of last session affecting the sale of alcholic liquor, and prohibiting it, so far as they are concerned, except when accompanied with a doctor's prescription, and only then to the extent ter. of six ounces, be amended. The pharmacists have, it seems, been exceeding the powers given them under this revised legislation, have been fined for infractions of the law, and now ask to be relieved of what they call "a grave injustice." The druggists are allowed to use liquor in the preparation of medicines, and where it is wanted in its purity, for sickness, it can be obtained—on the order, or prescription, of a physician. What more can they want? It is not to be supposed that the druggists want to traffic in liquor without a license. Moreover, those who are in the business, and have to pay specially and heavily for the permission, demand protection and expect to get it. Let the law stand as it is. It is a move in the right direction.

A VERY GREAT CRISIS.

The strike in England, affecting the working classes, especially the engineers and iron workers, has reached, it seems, an acute stage. The indication is that the unions will fail, and failure now will lose to them all the concessions and favours for which they have fought for years.

Primarily the agitation was for a shorter day-a day of eight hours. The workingmen contended that they could do as much in eight hours as they formerly did in ten, that they would be fresher, could put into a shorter time the energy which they were expected to spread over a longer period, that the employer in one case got as much work as in the other, and that, therefore, without change of pay, the shorter day should be adopted.

The employers would not assent to the doctrine that the men could do as much in eight hours as in ten, and cited their experience with the nine hours movement which generally obtained, after a season's agita! when Rev. G. R. Beamish will preach. tion. The same amount of work, it was argued, was not done, and, in addition to the employment of a large number of hands in a given work, to complete it in a certain time, there were restrictions in regard to apprentices which made capitaliste angry. Besides the employers said that competition, and from the products of other countries, made it impossible for them to accede to the new demands that were made upon them.

So the strike occurred. It has been carried on for months by a number of labour organizations, and it has affected hundreds of thousands of men. It has been a desperate conflict. The labour party has expended all its savings, an immense sum, has drawn upon its credit, through the individual members as far as possible, and has imperilled the comfort, the very existence, of their dependants. The capitalists have, apparently, determined to risk their a'l upon the result, and capital, united in such a work and with determination, usual-

If the end is really in sight the working. men will be worse off than ever, and it may be years before they can lift a hand in defiance of their masters. The eight hour day is gone, and with it, probably, the nine hour day, of which the labour element dyke. has not been sufficiently appreciative.

GIVE IT A CHANCE.

The Quebec legislature has had laid before it, by the government, a financial statement showing that it has has trenched in its expenses to the extent $427,000. "But," says the Montreal Star. "this estimate exceeds by over $700,000 the revenue raised last year by the province, including everthing except borrowed The young lad, who gave his name as money." And, after some disparaging remarks, to the effect that "none, of the obvious economies have been made," it declares: "What is really needed is a government which will make a business of retrenchment, and begin by cutting down the shameful cost of running the governmental machine in this province." Why does the Star not give the Marchand government a chance? A big thing has been accomplished in the retrenchment of expenses, and a further saving will, no doubt, be effected as the ministers have an opportunity to study the situation. The best manager that ever lived did not turn a business up side down in the first day or week or month in which he took command of it. He brought his experience and executive ability to bear upon the organization by degrees, making a change here and change there, keeping in view economy and efficiency, until he eventually reached the point at which he had been aiming The government of Quebec has been too expensive by far, but it is more easy to incur outlay than cut it down, especially after the administration has been running in ex travagant grooves for a number of years. Had Mr. Marchand decided to dismiss officials right and left, unceremoniously and of the seven cases booked, five have been hastily, in order to save money, the Star would have been, perhaps, one of the first papers to call him down. Now that he is proceeding cautiously and doing good work it is diseatisfied. Its outcry against the government is as senseless as that which was heard because the Laurier government did not bring down a new fiscal the four non-jury cases, two have been policy and tariff a few weeks after it accepted office. These tories are swift for economy-when they are in opposition and hard up for something to whine about. PRESS COMMENTS.

SOUR-MILK CASE SETTLED

AFTER A DAY AND A HALF'S ARG-UING IT IS DROPPED.

The Judge Thoroughly Knows The Milk Routes-The Mixed Docket That Was Handed To Justice Robertson Was Oddly Disposed Of-A Summary Of The Cases In Court.

The hearing of the Metzler vs. Gallagher case was continued all day yesterday. Evidence was taken from about rifteen witnesses on the matter of agreements between Mesers Metzler and Gallagher, and on the collection of milk from the different territories. When six o'clock arrived last night the plantiff's counsel offered to drop proceedings, which was agreed to by the defendant's solicitor, each side paying its own costs. His lordship dismissed the case. During the trial of the case the judge learned much of the milk routes of the township of Ernesttown and the enormous size of the cheese industry in that

The docket included three jury cases. One was thrown out on an illegality, one was adjourned by mutual consent of counsel, and the other was a case which should not have appeared in court, so said the judge. In that case the plaintiff got judgment for one dollar against the defendant. Out of disposed of, one being dropped by change of venue, and the other, another case which should never have been in court, was dropped by mutual consent of all parties, after monopolizing the court's time for nearly one and one-half days.

It is asserted on the part of Mr. Metzler that the first agreement said to have been dissolved on Feb. 27th, 1895, as alleged in the report of the Metzler-Gallagher suit, was not so completed, and that the action was not brought for a breach of the milk route agreement, but for a breach of the original agreement as to Wilton factory which also included Mr. Gallagher's influ ence to aid in maintaining the milk routes.
