From Drowning. MASCOUTAH, Ill., Dec. 29 -George Henry Washington and Maggie Wades were mar-

Fifteen years ago the bride's parents attended a picnic with their child and were in a boat that was capsized. Washington, who was one of the picnic managers, sprang into the river and rescued them. Mrs. Wades, in gratitude, told their rescuer that some day he should marry the girl.

Washington took the mother's joke seriously. He watched little Maggie grow up from childhood, and he says that all this time his love "grew and grew." Recently he donned his best clothing and, going to East St. Louis, prevailed on her to set the wedding day for Christmas eve. She consented.
