A DRUGGIST'S ERROR.

TWO SISTERS VICTIMS OF A BAD AND UNACCOUNTABLE CARELESSNESS.

IN FILLING A HARMLESS PRESCRIPTION, DRUGGIST AM ENDE MISTAKES MORPHINE FOR QUININE - MARGUERITE HOLTZ DEAD, HER SISTER DYING - AM ENDE HIMSELF TAKES POISON.

New York, Sept. 2.-In July Christian F. Holtz, his wife, three daughters, and little boy, went to the Catskills. Mr. Holtz is known as one of the richest men and largest wine dealers of Hoboken. At Paleville in the Catskills, they found all the jolly surroundings they had gone for, and an unexpected pleasure-friends who lived near to them, and made their vacation much jollier than it would otherwise have been. These were both doctors, Ernest and August Loewenthal. Ernest, the younger of the two, was in ill health, and had gone to the mountains to get strong again. The girls started out to see all the nice things that the young doctors had unearthed. Ella, 16 years old, was not in good health, and, like the younger of the brothers, could enjoy such pleasures as demanded no great outlay of strength. Gretchen became the companion of August, the elder of the young doctors. They soon were engaged to be married.

Gretchen, 19 years old, and a pupil of Vassar College, told her mother how things were. Mrs. Holtz thought Mr. Holtz would not like to have his daughter become Mrs. Loewenthal and Mrs. anybody else so soon, and that it would be best to wait over to their side. So the Holtzes went back to Hoboken and the Loewentals stayed at Paleville to wait until things should be arranged to make August happy.

HOW THEY GOT ALONG.

Mr. Holtz began to see about a house for his daughter, and everything was marching merrily when suddenly it was found that the mountain air, or some thing had affected Gretchen's health, and August, who had been doing all he knew for the younger sister, was obliged to play the part of physician to his betrothed as well. On Sunday the Holtz family sat on the balcony of the house on Hudson street, and Dr. August found the two his patients.

"I will cure you now," he said cheerily. "I have seen Dr. Conrad, of New York, and he says quinine will cure you." About 10 o'clock he ordered his patients into the house and then to the drug store. Dr. August wrote out a prescription for three grammes of quinine to be divided into four powders. Druggist Am Ende took a bottle from the shelf and weighed out the requisite number of grammes. Then Dr. August ran back to the Holtz house, and, with laughter and jokes, the powders were swallowed and the doctor went to his home. At 14 o'clock Ella Holtz's heavy breathing aroused her sister, and she in turn alarmed the family. Dr. August was sent for. Ella's symptoms were those of opium poisoning. Dr. J. Kudlich, the family physician, was sent for. He agreed with Dr. August in diagnosing the case, and the young doctor hurried to Am Ende's store to find out what the powders were. Meanwhile Ella had been seized with cramps and vomiting, and terrible agony. Am Ende entered the sick room with Dr. August Loewenthal. He did not think his powders had caused the trouble. The water covering one of the powders was broken, and the powder shown him.

"It looks like quinine," he said rather uncertainly. "Taste it," sternly said one of the doctors. The druggist did so. His hand dropped from his mouth, and his face became ghastly white, as he staggered back from the table. "I've made a mistake," he whispered. "It's not quinine, but morphine." He almost reeled out of the room, while the physicians redoubled their efforts to save the unfortunate girl, who had taken enough of the poison to kill ten men.

ANOTHER'S ILLNESS AND DEATH.

Gretchen had been foremost in endeavoring to help her sister. But at 4 o'clock she was affected as her sister had made. Coffee, as strong as could be made, had no effect, nor did acetate, the antidote to morphine. At 6:30 o'clock Gretchen seemed to improve, but only for a moment, and at 8 o'clock she died. Her sister, who had been first attacked, was still alive. All the doctors, with the exception of Dr. August Loewenthal, spent the day at Ella's bedside. Dr. Loewenthal after the death of his betrothed utterly crushed by the blow, remained secluded at his home. Mrs. Holtz was prostrated by the terrible suddenness of the blow. Mr. Holtz wandered nervously through his parlours.

"I blame no one," he said. "I make no charges. Charges will not bring back my dead child or cure the dying ones." About 2 o'clock the report spread that Druggist Am Ende had fled and that the police had a warrant for him. When it was presented to city physician Helfers to sign he refused. "There's no use in arresting Am Ende," he said. "He won't get away, unless he dies."

DRUGGIST POISONS HIMSELF.

Mr. Steinberg, city editor of the New York State Zeitung, found the druggist lying on his bed with remorse. "I have swallowed one of those powders," he said, and his friend repeated his words to the head clerk, Henry Frank. The latter called in Dr. Dudlich. He could not leave Ella Holtz, and Am Ende was turned over to Drs. Helfers and Steintin. Am confessed that he had swallowed two grains of the deadly poison. Dr. Helfers, when he declined to sign the warrant, said that if Am Ende recovered he would probably be insane from the shock. At one o'clock this morning there was a favorable turn in the condition of both the druggist and the young girl, and the doctors thought that there was still hope.

A TEXAS FEVER EPIDEMIC.

It Develops in Erie County, Pennsylvania - Dr. Bell's Fort-Warren and its Results.

"Texas fever exists in Erie County among the cattle. Dr. George W. Bell, veterinary surgeon, was called to examine cattle belonging to Frank Dakon. The doctor was accompanied by his assistant, Dr. George Freethy, and found Texas fever. Several of the herd stood off by themselves in a comatose condition, and bore unmistakable evidences of the touch of the scourge. In this herd three Durham cows, a bull and a yoke of oxen had already succumbed to the disease. Dr. Bell detected a number of victims among the herd, which to a general observer would have appeared as being in good health. Upon taking the temperature of these animals it was observed that the mercury registered from 104 to 108, whereas the normal condition is from 99 to 100 degrees. In a few hours they were among those which sought secluded places and stood with heads down. Dr. Bell reports the symptoms marked with all cases to have been as follows: A tendency to go by themselves; dull appearance; the nose dry and moderately hot; horns rather cold and of changeable temperature; visible mucous membrane, quite pale; breathing laborious; faces of a dark color.

"Dr. Bell and his assistant made a post-mortem examination of the cows which died during the day. There was nothing remarkable in the external appearance except that the muscles presented a bloodless appearance, similar to those of a slaughtered animal. On cutting into the muscular system only a drop or two of blood, mostly serum, flowed. The fluid portion of the blood had, to all appearances, been consumed by the fires which raged within the animal. The flesh was very bright, and but for this feature, would not of itself indicate the presence of disease. There were no morbid changes in the heart, the ventricles of the heart being empty. The liver was enlarged and gorged with clotted blood and very brittle. The spleen was two or three times its normal size and when cut presented a blackish appearance, and a very offensive fluid oozed out. The kidneys were somewhat enlarged, but were quite flabby, lacking the firm and solid condition of those organs general to healthy animals. The bladder was filled with a dark brown urine. The gall bladder was quite large and full of bile. The third stomach was impacted with dry and indigestible food, presenting the appearance of a hardened solid body. There was also a congested condition of the fourth stomach, with enlarged intestines."

The Herald gives particulars of the spread of the disease to several farms, and also the warning which the health department saw fit to issue. Reference is frequently made to the skill of Dr. Bell on the treatment of cattle and horse diseases, and we are glad to know that he is a Kingstonian. Dr. Bell's father is now a resident of Westport, and through his mother he is related to the Spooners of Stronning and Glenburnie. Charles and Reuben Spooner are his second cousins. He first studied at the Ontario Veterinary College, Toronto, and graduated. Then he went to the New York Veterinary College, took his diploma, and practiced in New York State for five years. Ten months ago he removed to Erie, Pa., and in that time developed a practice which must get him at the rate of $8,000 a year.

Such indeed has been his success, and the increase of his business, that he has been obliged to take in a partner. Dr. George Freethy, a graduate of the veterinary department of the Royal College of London.

LATE ROAD ACCIDENT.

HOW YOUNG MR. LYONS WAS INJURED - A BAD PIECE OF ROAD.

The Editor, British Whig. Sir, - Please allow me to give you the true facts with reference to the Perth Road accident. Last Thursday evening my brother was driving down the "Lime Kiln Hill" with the separator of a two-horse threshing machine the horses shied at a stone on the side of the road, and as the road is very narrow the machine went over the side of the hill. It is a disgrace and a shame that the public is forced to pay toll on a road where the hills and bridges are in such a state as they are on this road. There are over two hundred feet of this hill without protection of any kind, and that, too, where there is an almost perpendicular descent at the side the whole way along, averaging from 12 to 35 ft. Where the accident occurred the side is built up with stone to a height of over 5 ft. I do not ask any one to take my statement for fact. The hill can be seen. My brother was seriously injured, one of the horses and the machine ruined. It has been reported that something gave way, that the neck-yoke broke, &c. These stories, no doubt, have been framed by members of the Perth Road Company who wish to shirk the responsibility of the accident. It is high time the public took this matter in hand and found out whether we can be compelled to pay toll, every five miles in order that we may run half a dozen chances of breaking our necks between each gate and the next. "The end is not yet." Yours truly, Aug. 31. H. V. LYON.

MENAGRIE IN HIS STOMACH.

Chicago, Aug. 29.-Dr. Rowles, of the Marine Hospital, tells a singular occurrence in connection with an operation recently performed at the hospital. Some time ago a sailor applied for admission. He was tall, lank and cadaverous, and was suffering from an almost perpetual pain in the stomach. At times he would be seized with frightful convulsions, and nothing seemed to allay his sufferings but food. He had a ravenous appetite, and could eat a hearty meal a dozen times a day. The doctors, after a long course of treatment, succeeded in taking from the man a tape worm and also a snake thirteen inches long, and something a monstrous angle worm. The physicians were somewhat astonished at finding so strange a resident as the snake in the man's stomach, but they were quite dumfounded by the startling phenomenon that presented itself soon after. While examining the reptile the physicians found that it was actually giving birth to another claimant for the vast quantity of food devoured by the unfortunate Jack Tar. They could account for the appearance of the snake in the man's stomach, but had found its way there, when nearly at the bottom of loose rock and coal fell down the pit, striking the man upon the cage and instantly killing four. Two others are fatally injured and three seriously. The cage, which was made of heavy timber and iron work, was completely demolished.

A TERRIBLE MINING ACCIDENT.

A Number of Men Killed in a Shaft - Wreck of the Cage. Wilkesbarre, Sept. 2.-A terrible accident has just occurred at Oakwood's shaft, operated by the Lehigh Valley Coal Co. The cage, in which were six men, was being lowered into the shaft, when nearly at the bottom a mass of loose rock and coal fell down the pit, striking the men upon the cage and instantly killing four. Two others are fatally injured and three seriously. The cage, which was made of heavy timber and iron work, was completely demolished.

MEN OF THE HOUR.

LATE REUBEN E. FENTON.

EX-GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK STATE - A LONG AND USEFUL PUBLIC CAREER.

The sudden death of Reuben E. Fenton, ex-Governor of New York, at Jamestown, on Aug. 25, calls to mind the leading incidents in a useful and exemplary career. Mr. Fenton was of English descent, his first paternal American ancestors being from the county Nottingham, England. His father settled in Chateaugay county in 1808. His birth was in 1819. He received a good education, read law, and practiced at Jamestown, N.Y. Not prospering in a profession, he embarked in a mercantile career, and by trading in lumber and in that year he was elected Supervisor of Carroll and served eight successive years, during three of which he was chairman of the board. He was nominated for Congress on the Democratic ticket in 1852 and elected. As one of the forty-four Northern Democrats who voted against the extension of slavery, he alienated many who had been his supporters. Whigs and Democrats united to give him a second nomination in 1854. He was defeated, but two years after, as the candidate of the newly organized Republican party, he was elected by an overwhelming vote. This triumph was more than equalled by the extraordinarily large votes cast for him in 1858, 1860 and 1862. He proved himself to be an able and eloquent member, and was among the foremost defenders of the Union. The influence he secured as a supporter of Mr. Lincoln led in 1864 to his nomination for Governor of New York State. He not only succeeded in defeating Horatio Seymour but led the campaign with such ability that the Republicans gained a sweeping victory. Mr. Fenton's administration as Governor was eminently successful, and he was re-elected in 1866. In 1868 he was elected to the United States Senate. His term expired in 1876. Afterward he was the only public trust filled by him was that of the United States Commissioner at the International Monetary Conference, Paris, in 1875. He was a supporter of Horace Greeley in the campaign of 1872, and of Mr. Blaine in 1884. Not long after his return from his second trip to Europe in 1879, he was called to the duties of President of the Erie and Ontario Bank of Jamestown, and continued to discharge the duties of the position till his death. This, with his somewhat extensive private affairs, occupied him during the spring, summer and fall seasons. He was also prominently identified with the social and educational interests of Jamestown, and was a citizen of unusual public spirit, liberality and enterprise. A few days before his death he liberally aided in establishing two new railroad projects in Western New York. The last occasion on which Governor Fenton made a public address was on the day of General Grant's funeral, when a meeting of citizens was held in the grounds of his residence. He presided on that occasion, and delivered an address which expressed his high appreciation of the General's character. Gov. Fenton was of fine appearance, being six feet, tall and well proportioned, with features singularly striking and pleasing. He was affable and exceedingly courteous and kindly to all.

A TOURIST IS ENTRANCED.

The scenery of our back country completely fascinates him. Some of the prettier views which burst upon his vision - a route that is most attractive to the traveller - The K. & P.R.R. and its Expedition.

A tourist writes us, that being in Toronto he determined to see Kingston, and scenes of past historical interest. He arranged to take the roundabout trip and pass through a part of Ontario which is yet in a primeval condition, comparatively speaking. He left Toronto about 8:30 a.m., and after a pleasant ride through well settled and improved land, came to Peterboro, a place of much significance, as it is the most important station between Toronto and Ottawa. At Tweed he began to encounter the so-called rough land, but a parallel could scarcely be drawn between the appearance of the country around Kalamazoo, at which point we strike the county of Frontenac. For beauty and variety of scenery he does not know where it could be surpassed. Towering masses of rock stretched or rather appeared piled up on each other as far as the eye could reach. The rock masses looked like flocks of huge sheep as they glistened in the afternoon sun. "As this part of Ontario forms a kind of ridge from which the waters flow either way to the Ottawa or St. Lawrence or Bay of Quinte," he continues, "we had a splendid opportunity of seeing the country in all its wildness and pristine grandeur. The hills and dale, forest and lake expansion, passed in rapid succession. No sooner would we lose sight of a beautiful sheet of water resting calmly like a gem beneath the hills, on the right, than another stretch would suddenly burst into view on the left. Now we would wind round the base of a mountain of granite, only to be succeeded the next minute by a cutting many feet in depth that changed day into midnight at once. Emerging therefrom we beheld far beneath the creek or the silvery pond, where the moon and wild duck dispersed in the security which solitude ensures. It was like a fairy vision. It was difficult to realize that the scene possessed animation. It was like a huge panorama, always changing, yet maintaining the same strange wonder that makes one feel that he is an intruder, that he has no place in this natural stage. Now we approach a huge valley over which an iron bridge is stretched. The hollow reverberations cause us to look down into the abyss. What a scene. The valley below discloses to view the country road, the yoke of oxen and the strange compact cart wandering to the village. In a field close by two men are engaged in drawing in their grain. The curling smoke rises from the pipe of the cabin, and everything seems to say, 'Solitude possesses a charm that society cannot give.' At length we came to the so-called 'sink hole.' Everyone looked anxious. The engine slackened her speed, and we went over the obstruction without mishap or apprehension. The 'sink hole' has become a landmark on the line of the Pacific Railway. Soon we emerged on a lone forest of pine, cedar and hemlock, and came in sight of the beautiful Shabot Lake.

"We reached a land that is heavenly smiles. On the sunny shores of the Grecian lakes."

"Every one strained their eyes to see the almost enchanted picture. Beautiful islands rose like gems from the glassy surface of the lake, and their forms were mirrored, which lent fantastic beauty to the scene. One would think we were beholding Eel Bay or Fisher's Elbow, for the locality has much of the appearance of the noble St. Lawrence. This beautiful scene met my view for several minutes, when a bluff suddenly shut it out. Everyone looked disappointed, especially those who had not much opportunity to take the lake in." Comments were heard on every side, and regrets expressed that this or that object was not seen, when, lo! the lake again burst into view, and appeared even more lovely than before. Soon the whistle blew, and we reached the Union Station; in a few minutes were bounding over the K. & P. for Kingston at a speed that made us giddy. The same kind of romantic scenery met our view on Long Lake, Eagle Lake, Mud Lake, and a dozen others were pointed out to us, and received many favorable comments. There was no delay. We came rapidly through, and reached the city shortly after 5 p.m., having enjoyed a most pleasant trip. In fact it would be difficult to find such another for the same distance on the continent."

THE BARLEY CROP.

The General Prospect - Yield About the Same as Last Year - The Color Opt. Gaylord, Downey & Co., of Oswego, report: One of our firm returned from a tour through the leading barley sections of Ontario, assists us in a fairly accurate opinion of the harvest, now nearly finished. It is doubtful if the average was much less than last year, as in most sections the straw was heavy with long heads well filled out. The yield cannot vary much from that of last year. Considerable was secured early in good condition, but frequent rains prevailed during harvest, staining more or less the greater part of the crop. Hot weather at a critical time hastened the ripening of much of it, and shriveled the berry. Thus there will be greater extremes of color and weight than we had a year ago, from bright to badly stained and from heavy to light weight, though probably little or none are equal in weight to the last crop, which was very superior in that respect.

The quantity of malting barley from Canada will be about the same as last year, and consist of a larger percentage of bright with the bulk of the crop Ex. 2 and No. 2, probably in nearly equal proportions. We have had numerous reports regarding the barley crop from the Western States, and about the same crop conditions exist in these localities as in Canada.

ALLEGED WIDEMURDERER.

Tragedy Near St. Catharines - Revelations of the Murderer's Brothers. St. Catharines, Sept. 1.-A sensation has been created here by a report that a supposed murder had been committed at a place called Effingham. Late last fall a man named Alex. Easterby and his wife mysteriously disappeared. The friends of the missing parties became suspicious that all was not right. A brother of the missing man recently made some startling revelations. He states that Easterby was continuously quarrelling with his wife, and finally killed her and buried the body. Another brother appears to have been an accomplice, and is now in custody. Howard was engaged by John to assist in removing the body of the unfortunate woman. While doing this the brothers quarrelled, and in the affray Howard was nearly killed. John states that Alexander killed his wife, and afterwards arranged to commit suicide, asking John, if he did not kill himself outright, to finish the job. Alexander then shot himself, but not fatally, and John cut Alexander's throat with a razor, and buried the body in Miller's woods. Upon repairing to the spot pointed out by Howard the body was found buried about three feet from the surface.

The general belief is that the parts of the story relating to the death of Alexander is untrue, search having been made in the woods for the body without success. An inquest is to be held this afternoon, when some further light may be thrown upon the matter.

$5,000,000 KEPAID TO-DAY.

Canadian Pacific Repays the Government $5,000,000 or $10,000,000 Idle Money. Montreal, Sept. 2.-Yesterday the Canadian Pacific Railway Company paid over to the Government the $5,000,000 which was loaned them last session on the security of $5,000,000 in bonds. Some time ago the government repaid a large amount which it owed the Bank of Montreal. It is believed in financial circles that the Bank of Montreal must have from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 which it will find difficult to place. The tendency of this great holding of money will be to seek an outlet in trade and money markets of the United States, as well supplied and rates are almost unprecedentedly low. It is many years since so much was lying idle in banks in Canada. Rates here are low and the earning power of the banks will be reduced.

IRELAND ASA NATION.

MR. PARNELL MAKES HIS POSITION ON IT QUITE CLEAR.

THE IMPRESSION MADE BY THE STATEMENT ON THE PEOPLE GENERALLY - GREAT BANQUET AT DUBLIN - THE "TIMES" ON ENGLAND'S ANSWER TO PARNELL.

London, Sept. 2.-The Times, referring to Parnell's speech last night, says: "We are glad that Parnell has at last denounced the outrages in Ireland. If he had done so before the Coercion Act would not have been necessary. He must not deceive himself. 'Impossible' is the only reply to his demand for independence."

Dublin, Sept. 1.-A banquet was given by the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House this evening in honour of Mr. Parnell and his Irish colleagues at the House of Commons. Three hundred guests were present, exclusive of the members of parliament.

In his speech Mr. Parnell said that if Home Rule was refused the Irish, they would make it impossible for the English to legislate. England could either grant the Irish the right to rule themselves or make the country a Crown colony. The letter would be practically tantamount to the former. He denounced outrages, saying that the continuation of them would be a terrible blow to the Irish cause. The coming winter of farming depression, to show the stuff they were made of, by refraining from exacting rents which the soil refused to yield. If the landlords persisted in exacting the full pound of flesh in future there would be little flesh left to exact. Mr. Parnell said he was confident Ireland was on the brink of victory.

Dublin, Sept. 2.-Parnell in his speech last evening ridiculed the theory set up by Englishmen, that the Tories and Liberals would drop their party difference in order to unitedly combat the Irish party in parliament in the struggle for Irish independence.

A SHOCKING TRAGEDY.

SHE DEFENDS HERSELF WITH AN AXE - HER ASSAULT CUT IN ELEVEN PLACES - HE CANNOT LIVE. Belleville, Aug. 31.-The township of Huntington was the scene of a shocking tragedy on Sunday. On Saturday, Martin Archibald, who owns and occupies a well cultivated farm near Garner's hotel, Huntington township, drove to Madoc to transact some business. He fell in with convivial friends and imbibed so much that, when he started for home, he was under the influence of drink. About 2 o'clock on Sunday morning he stopped at a house occupied by Mrs. Mary Adams. He tried to gain admittance, but was refused. He insisted upon being admitted, and the woman, who was alone with her young son, threatened to assault him with an axe if he entered. Opposition only made him more determined, and he began a furious assault upon the door, which finally yielded to his blows. When the door was battered down Archibald seized Mrs. Adams, when she made a determined struggle to escape him. Seeing that she was powerless in his grasp, she called for her son to assist her. He laid responded and struck Archibald with an axe, whereupon he released Mrs. Adams. The vindictive spirit of the injured woman was now thoroughly aroused, she seized her young son, and attacked her now powerless adversary, inflicting eleven cuts, seven on his head and four on his shoulders. The wounds were horrible beyond description, and the doctors state that he cannot live. When the woman had finished her work, she went to a neighbor's house and told them about the affair, stating that she had killed Archibald. On returning to the house it was found that life was not extinct. Dr. Boulter, of Stirling, dressed the wounds, but gives no hope for his recovery. Archibald is about 50 years of age, and has a wife and four or five children above reproach.

KARL CARNAVON'S POPULARITY.

The Countess Tickles the People With a Few Sentences in Pure Irish. Dublin, Sept. 2.-Lord Carnarvon yesterday received a deputation with an address from the Gaelic Society, which hopes to restore the Irish language. He assured them of the conviction, of the importance of study of the Erse dialect, not only from a philological point of view, but because of the mental superiority conferred by linguistic power. The Countess of Carnarvon delighted the deputation by addressing them in a few sentences of pure Irish.

OUTRAGES IN IRELAND.

Dublin, Sept. 2.-Moonlight outrages are on the increase in the county of Kerry. The houses of two bailiffs were fired into last night by parties in disguise, but fortunately no one was injured.
