While he loss of life was not large, it was sufficient to create great alarm. Bands of armed men patroled the streets, a number of arrests had been made, and among them several men supposed to be from America. The detective force of Scotland Yard was immediately put upon the case, and among the suspects arrested was a man said to be Dr. Gallagher of Brooklyn. His friendsstrenusly denied this declarng that Dr. Gallagher was not in England at the time of the explosion, but was in the city of Brooklyn. All sorts of false hoods were resorted to in vain to prove an alibi for the doctor. He was tried, convicted, and sentenced to imprisonment for life. It was evidently a troublesome question two thousand years ago, when he who spake as hirer man spake, saying, "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have I give unto thee." From the earliest ages international credit and mercantile exchange have been two of the most important questions among men. No government ever instituted by man has been able to support itself without occasionally calling for outside aid, and the United States has been one of the most gigantic borrowers of ancient or modern time.

to our creditors was about three thousand millions of dollars, and it became a serious question as to how the interest on our bonds should be paid. Greenbacks were a legal tender for indebtedness all over the United States, and the premium on gold was two hundred. Never since the creation of government among men was a nation's trial for honor and honesty put to so severe a test. Honor said, "Pay in gold;" expediency said, "Pay in greenbacks." Great national parties were form ed on the question alone, but those who had charge of the government, and who had fought the war chrough to a successfu issue, said, "Honor before expediency; and that decision, in the hour of our greatest peril, has placed the United States national honor second to that of no nation Once more the nation is tempted, bu
