modern times. To-day, in commemoration of that day of dreadful havocand suffering, Chicago celebrates the re-building and pro gress of what is now the second city i America. Probably in the of Chicago there has never such a number of people congregated on the streets. The day was made a general holiday. The board of trade and nearly all business houses were closed, and to swell the crowds thousands of people came from the surrounding country, the rail ways reporting the heaviest passenger traffic since Chicago day at the world's fair three years ago. Banners and flags swung at frequent intervals across the streets, and from every tall building others floated, while the front of almost every structure was a mass of red, white and blue. Many of the show windows also were elaborately decorated in honor of the

Fears That It was Lost in the Gale and the Crew Perished. ERIE, Pa., Oct. 9. -There are grave apprehensions that the str. Sanalac, of Bay City, was lost in the gale which prevailed on Lake Erie Tuesday and Wednesday. The Sanalac left Buffalo, with the barge Oneonta in tow, Monday night, for Midland, Ont. The gale increased in energy, and the steamer and her barge being light were terribly tossed. Wednesday afternoon, when about fifteen miles west of here, Capt. Hanna, of the Sanalac, blew signals to Capt. Shean, of the barge, that he was going to cast off his line. Capt. Shean wanted him to run for Erie. Hanna replied that he was sinking, then Shean observed that the crew of the Sanalac were putting pails into the life boats, preparatory to abandoning her. The Sanalac was headed for Conneaut, Ohio. The air was so full of snow that the steamer was soon lost sight of. The Oneonta drifted about and finally saved herself from going on to the beach by getting a hold with her anchors. There are no tidings of the Sanalac or of her crew of twelve

IVORY ON TRIAL

For the Third Time Be Was Before Bow Street Court. LONDON, Oct. 9. - Edward J. Ivory, alias Edward Bell, the alleged dynamite conspirator, arrested in Glasgow, Sept 12th, was arraigned for the third time in the Bow street police court this morning. A boy named James Burns, step son of Patrick McCaffrey, was called to the witness stand and identified Ivory as having called at his mother's house in Glasgow and as afterwards having gone in search of O'Hara and Meagher to whom he had letters of introduction from Kearney. Meagher's wife was placed upon the wit-ness stand and testified that her busband was a member of the Young Ireland society and also of the amnesty society. Mrs. Meagher identified Ivory as having brought a letter to her house addressed to her husband. The prisoner, she said, told her that he had come to America and that he had never crossed the Atlantic before. Mr. Meagher, the witness said, was absent from home at the time and she refused to take the letter, because she did not know the prisoner, and told him that if he left the letter she would burn it. Ivory finally left taking the letter with him.

Elizabeth Harper, a nurse in the cancer hospital, identified Ivory as having visited McCaffrey while the latter was confined in the hospital.

Police sergeant Maguire detailed the arrest of Ivory in Glasgow, who, when he was taken into custody, said: "I haven't nothing to fear. I fancy that somebody has brought something to Glasgow for which you blame me." The hearing was further adjourned for a Lord Rosebery Made Only one Significan London, Oct. 9 .- The Daily Mail has a interview had by its correspondent with Lord Rosebery at Dalmeny Park, his seat in Edinburgh. The writer says that the ex-prime minister fenced every question, turning to irrelevant topics. His only noteworthy remark was in response to an allusion to his sudden action in resigning the leadership of the liberal party. He express passed west, in which John said: "It was not sudden.
