As the endowment and the act incorporating given the public library or that the fund the Midland district school society are matters of a past age, veryefew citizens are fully conversant with the aims and objects.

As it is a public matter and one upon which every citizen should be conversant, and Prof. Glover, Queen's New Professor. Inwith a view to enlightenment, this informa-

The house of assembly having failed in its efforts to substitute a common school act for the one establishing a grammar school in each district, a movement was made in Kingston in 1814-15 to supply the want of elementary schools in this neighborhood. The popularity at the time of the Lancasterian system of educating children, so much in use in England, added greatly to the seal of those who joined themselves together to form the Midland district school society, for the promotion of education on that system. The society was prompted to action in this matter by an organization in London, Eng., which had been tormed there to promote "the education of the poor in Upper and Lower

Joseph Lancaster, its founder, was born in Southwark, England, in 1778. His father was a Chelsea pensioner, who had served in the British army during the American war. At the age of eighteen for 25c the pair, easy value for Joseph was an assistant at two schools, one a boarding, the other a day school: and thus he became acquainted with all the defects attendant on the old system of tuition in both kinds of schools. He took up the Rev. Dr. Bell's Madras system and improved its details. The combined system of monitorial and systemized teaching was known as the "Bell and Lancaster system." As it became popular an asso-ciation was formed in England, originally entitled "The Royal Lancasterian institution for promoting the education of the children of the poor," and subsequently for the sake of brevity and simplicity, "The British and foreign school society." The chief feature of the system was its monitorial character, and Lancaster's judicious mingling of religion, amusement and instruction, gave it popularity. Lancaster visited the United States, West Indies and Lower Canada. The legislature of the last named province voted to him several grants for educational purposes. Early in the year 1815 the midland district school society was organized, and soon afterwards a subscription paper was circulated, which resulted in the collection of £447 10s, towards the building of a school house for the society. Sums amounting from $10 to $50 were subscribed by many of the leading citizens at the time.

On July 15th, 1815, the midland district "Proposals for erecting a school house in this town for the accommodation of all the The str. St. Andrew, Fort William, children of both sects unprovided with the means of education, etc. We, the sub scribers, promise to pay the sums annexed to our respective names for the accomplishment of this important object, on consideration that the legislative will grant to the trustees, who may be chosen by us, the privilege of holding property and transacting business according to law. This establishment should be held in shares of should have the liberty of voting in all meetings of the subscribers, and shall have morning with coal from Fairhaven, N.Y., the privilege of sending one child to be instructed at the school ten per cent. cheaper than the children of non-subscribers morning with 3,100 bushels of peas for that are admitted, and provided that any person take two or more sharer in this establishment, the same privileges shall be granted for each share. The plan of instruction to be adopted shall be that which has been found most succossful in Great Britain and Ireland. Great attention shall be paid to the morals of the children, but no interference shall ever take place in the school respecting catechisms and religious creeds. All the children shall be requested to attend divine as their parents and guardians shall direct. The trustees shall be chosen annually, by whom school instructors shall be provided, and all necessary business with respect to the school transacted." The system on which the midland district society proposed to manage their schools was the Lancasterian after the money had been subscribed, but not collected, the society met and passed a series of resolutions, providing for the erection of a schoolhouse sufficiently large to accommodate 400 children; naming a committee to present a petition to parliament. etc. Herewith is given, in part, a copy of the act passed March 14th, 1815, incorporating the society: "Whereas, funds have been collected and a society lately formed in England designated 'The committee for promoting the educated of the poor in Upper and Lower Can-ada,' the object of which society is to 'promote the education and moral improvement of the poor of every religious denomination in Canada ,' and, whereas, in furtherance of the wishes of that institution, a subscription has been entered into at Kingston, in the Midland district of this province, to assist in carrying into effect their benevolent intentions with regard to this province, and it is apprehended that, if countenanced and supported by the laws of this province and established upon a permanent footing, and vested with powers or better enabling the subscribers thereto to carry into execution their charitable and useful designs, such an institution would be of extensive use and of real benefit to the public; and, whereas, the purposes aforesaid cannot be effected without the aid of the legislature: (1) Be it enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the legislative council and assembly of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled of, and under the authority of, an act passed in the parliament of Great Britain. That, on the first day of May next ensuing, there shall be held a meeting of the subscribers for the purposes aforesaid in the town of Kingston in the Midland district aforesaid, at which meeting a president, secretary, treasurer and six trustees shall be chosen from among the Pis Subject Here. The subjoined letter was received this morning from Major Pond, manager for Ian Maclaren throughout his American tour, which, according to the schedule of secured dates received, will last till Wednesday, Dec. 16th:

"MONTREAL, Oct. 15.—Just arrived with Dr. and Mrs. Watson after a night's ride, or rather a broken night, for we left Burlington, Vt., at 4.20 this morning. At Burlington last night Dr. Watson was met with a great throng, who had filled the large opera house to the remotest back row in the gallery and then 150 chairs or the stage, everyone occupied and people standing in the aisles. Not only this, but crowds came from neighboring cities to be disappointed in admission and thronged the hotel and even filled the dining room where the doctor and his wife were at supper, eagerly desiring one look at the man whose writings have touched the tenderest chords of their hearts, It was not the usual morbid curiosity seekers but the choicest and best people of the land. Never in my experience have I witnessed such demonstrations of affection and love for any man, and especially one from a dis-tant land. Dr. Watson shock hands for nearly half an hour last night after the lecture, the audience persisting in remaining for the opportunity. His visit to you will surely be an event long to be remembered. I hope you have announced his subject, Certain Traits of Scottish Character. This is what you will enjoy.

mouth Men in Court, Charged With In the police court this morning C. Millan stated that he had engaged workmen to make the changes in his bar-room, required by the board of license commissioners and that the work is now going on. The case was adjourned until Monday, when a number of other hotel-keepers will be summoned to appear on similar charges.

The magistrate said there was apparent partiality in the inspector in bringing Mr. Millan into court on this charge, while there were others equally culpable. The inspector said he had summoned defendant in order to let others see that they must observe the law. As to the question of whether or not the commissioners have power to enact such a law as that involved in the case the magistrate said the hotelkeepers had better not depend on that ground. He would enforce the laws made by the board. Four young men were charged separate y with the larceny of a quantity of iron pipe from the tannery wharf, Portsmouth. Each of the accused pleaded not guilty and elected summary trial. Reeve Fisher, of Portsmouth, testified that he was the owner of the pipe. It had been lying on the wharf for nearly a year past. The accused carried it away and had it on the street, he thought, from where it was afterwards carried back to the tannery property. So far as he knew the pipe had not been off the property. Thomas McWaters, who has charge of the tannery wharf, swore that he saw the prisoners carrying the pipe from the wharf to King street. They laid it just across bridge near the lacrosse grounds. No one the fence from the tannery lot, and witnessed the fatal leap, but about 12:30 beside a junk cart. Witness told prisoners to put the pipe back again and it would be all right. The cart was then driven away. Soon afterwards the pipe was carried back to the wharf from which it had been taken.

Prisoners admitted having taken the pipe, not knowing to whom it belonged. They intended to sell it, but when told to take it back they did so.

Reeve Fisher stated that he did not wish to push the case, but money and other articles have been stolen from him, and he suspected one of the prisoners, and wished to put a stop to the thisving. The magistrate gave the prisoners a severe lecture, after which he dismissed
