THE THREE COMMISSIONERS WILL KNOW NO POLITICS.

Reciprocity, a Plank in McKinley's Platform-Regeneration of Conservatives-Sir Charles' Montreal Speech -- Cartwright and Fielding Return From New York.

[From Our Own Correspondent.] Ottawa, Nov. 10 .- For some time to come the merchants and manufacturers of the country will be given an opportunity of representing to the Government any views which thay may hold in re. spect of the revision of the tariff. Under the Conservative Administration the friends of the Government were consulted and often obliged with valuable concesdons. Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. Fielding and Mr. Paterson, the three Commissioners who will ascertain the feeling of the mercantile and manufacturing interests, will knew no politics in their investigations. They will visit all the important centers in the country, and will be accessible to everybody who desires to offer any suggestions. The Ministers know that the task before them is of a delicate nature, and that some may hesitate, from personal mo tives, to lay their views before them. To such the assurance is given that the commissioners will treat their information as confidential. The Conservative newspapers which are clamoring for publicity in respect of the transactions of the commission must know well, that in many cases the interests of the country and of the private citizen would be injured by publishing the testimony of the latter. In 1894, when the late Government made what was humorously described as a "revision" of the tariff, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, his Minister of Fin ance and his Controllers made a half hearted attempt to elicit the views of business men. But Mr. Robert Birmingham, the Secretary of the Conservative organization in Ontario, discovered that certain Liberals had appeared before the commission and tad given evidence This, protested Mr. Birmingham, would never do. It was suicidal to allow the enemics of the Government to offer suggestions and arguments looking towards the lowering of duties. It was possible, Mr. Birmingham pointed out, that the Government might not find it desirable to adopt the advice of these Liberals. even though their arguments in favor of a change might have been backed by tants and figures. What reason, asked Mr. Birmingham, could the Government give for ignoring this information? Ignorance could not be alleged, for the gentlemen in question would rise up in evidence against the Administration. And, as the Secretary pointed out, it often was most desirable that the Government

forth in his statement made in Quebec should be able to plead ignorance. The the other day: "We shall have settled it appositeness of Mr. Birmingham's by giving conscience the rights of conarguments was at once conceded, and the science: we shall have settled it in such commission was abandoned. The couna manner that those who believe in retry may be assured that in this case there ligious instruction in the schools shall will be no discrimination. The three have satisfaction on this point. We have gentlemen who are to visit our chief obtained from our fellow-countrymen cities are in search of information that of the province of Manitoba, represented shall aid them in their task of revising by the Government of Manitoba, all the the tariff. They hold that every Canaconcessions which a man of honor and a dian has a right to express his views on man of conscience, whatever may be his any item. The greater the number of religion, whatever may be his race or their interviewers the better will they be nationality, has the right to demand." The Premier added that he did not ex-Reciprocity, a Plank in McKinley's Plat pect that the settlement would satisfy the extremists on either side. As to Sir One of the planks in the platform Charles' third charge, the only thing to Major McKinley, the President-elect of be said is that in place of being a fault, the United States, was reciprocity. The in such cases reticence is a virtue. Republican party has pledged the Admin-Cartwright and Fielding Return From istration which it has placed in power to meet half-way any foreign power which Sir Richard Cartwright and Mr. Fieldmay desire to execute a "give and take" ing have returned from New York, arrangement. The Ottawa Government where they have had interviews with will probably be able to effect some kind many prominent Americans. The Minof agreement looking towards the existers found that the gentlemen with change of commodities now paying heavy whom they talked, and who are in duties. The Canadian farmer would hear touch with the leaders of the Republican with satisfaction that once more he would party, had every hope that a favorable have a chance of selling his barley, his measure of reciprocity would be accorded beans, his eggs and his live stock in the Canada by the incoming Administration. markets of the United States. To gain If our Government will meet the Amerithis concession Canada might well agree cans half way it is certain that the neto admit certain manufactures free of gotiations will not prove abortive as did duty. Cotton, coal, pig iron, binder those begun by the Conservatives, Mr. twine; all of these articles might well Laurier and his aides recognize that the be placed on the free list, or subjected Canadian farmer has been unduly handito much smaller imposts than those now capped by the effects of our present tariff. Their first effort will be to ease his burchance of securing an equitable agreedens, both by securing for him a larger ment now than she had under her lately market and by releasing him from the dismissed rulers. In business life it power of the combines whose prey he has would hardly be expected that A. who been for years. The men now in power has been in the habit of decrying and casting all manner of slurs upon B, his at Ottawa recognize that the agriculrich and powerful rival, should be able to suddenly visit the object of his denunciations and to arrange with him a mutually beneficial business transaction. Even the lest and most charitable of us would not be surprised to hear that B had told A that he had no desire to have any connection with a man who had spent years in vilifying him and his relations. The Conservative Government for years was in the position of A in this little apologue. In place of desiring to live in amity with our neighbors the late Administration was continually on tiptoe to begin a back fence quarrel. The new Government will look after Canadian interests faithfully and well. The Americans will not get the better of us. Neither will they be regarded as enemies, seeking to injure us without cause. Regeneration of Conservatives. The Opposition press continues to simulate confidence in the alleged regeneration of the Conservative party. Charles Tupper addressed a meeting of his followers in Montreal last week. As always, he was prophetic of success. "We are in a magnificent position at Ottawa," said he, "We have a strong Opposition, and we are working harmoniously to gether." The country will agree that the friends of Hykert, of McGreevy, of Mr. St. Louis, of Curran bridge fame and of Senecal, are in the position that suits them and Canada best-the position at the left of the Speaker. But we may be pardoned for declining to accept the statement that the utmost harmony prevails. If all is unity, why did Clarke Wallace, during the last session, decline to attend the Opposition caucuses? Why did Sir Charles announce the reorganization of the party on a new basis, a basis that should deprive Montague and Haggart of the chief places in the ranks of the Untario Conservatives and make new men the allenees of their power? Sir. Charles always has been able to convince himself that what he desires is what exists. He was assured of victory in June last; he was certain, two decades and more ago, that he could compass Sir John Macdonald's downfall and supplant the Old Man as leader of the party. The most signal proof of the weakness of the Conservatives is to be seen in the very fact of its permitting Sir Charles to continue in the leadership. It is known to every man who takes an interest in public affairs that he is out of touch with the latter day spirit of our politics. Our ideas use for the partisan dictator. , If Sir Charles had understood this be would not have made the fatal error of reading such men as Sproule and McNeill out of the party. But Sir Charles managed the affairs of the late Government on the Catalinian principle of "Rule or ruin." believe that even now he would deny that he made any error in antagonizing the anti-coercionists. The case is simply one of the world's progressing while the man stands still. For nearly ten years

Sir Charles was out of touch with Cana-dian politics. He held his little court in London. He was in much demand as an ofter-dinner speaker at great banquets. He was ascenstomed, I am told, to speak of the Government that came after the death of Sir John Macdonald in a

The much talked of reorganization of the

The men who met in Toronto the other needs remodeling; not patching up.

Even for the repairs which are to be made the structure has architects with-

In his Montreal speech Sir Charles as-based upon three grounds: (A) That the
