The Late Father Higgins Was a Laborer

For the Master. Mgr. Farrelly, at the funeral of the late . Higgins, in Hastings, said a half century had passed since he first became acquainted with the lamented father: veneration, respect and admiration of sterling qualities of mind and heart Father Higgins had growth with the passing years. He had known the difficulties that Father Higgins had to meet with when fifty years ago he came to this parish of Hastings. He was the only priest between Belleville and Peterboro. and made long sick calls over miserable roads, in all seasons of the year. It was his lot to have succeeded Father Higgins in this parish, therefore he well knew what the deceased had to undergo, vet he never wearied. Twenty years afterwards, when they were together in the cathedral at Kingston, the same virtues marked his licly charge him with teaching contrary to life as when he began his priestly career. SEARCHING FOR MINERALS. A Class of Students Visit The Back Townships on a Field Excursion.

The field excursion of the mineralogy and geology classes of the school of mines last week was one of the most successful yet held. The party left Kingston Thursday evening, by the K. & P., for Bedford. Through the courtesy of the K. & P. officials the boys found hotel accommodation in the station house, and the unusual appearance which that landmark assumed rather startled the early morning travel lers. Before daybreak the enthusiastic young scientists were astir and, despite the unfavorable weather, started for the Glendower iron mine. The railway cuttings. along the Glendower afforded excellent opportunities to become acquainted with the home life of a great number of mineral species. The Glendower is a typical example of an important class of economic deposits and this, with its geological relations, occupied the attention of the party for some time. Returning, the Godfrey mica mine was visited. This entirely ferent mode of occurrence of an economic mineral was also an instructive study.

fifty cent fine levied upon the individual not be saddled on anyone. The cavern near Bedford which conceals in its recesses such splendid calcite crystals announced that friends and admirers of the was explored by the smoky flame of a birch junior champions intended presenting each bark torch. On Friday evening the party took the train for Sharbot Lake. Theday's hard tramping had so far failed in dampening their ardor that they examined the shores of the lake by lantern. Saturday morning found them at Tichborne siding, cooking breakfast on the roadside by the light of the stars. The Boyd Smith phosphate mines at Eagle Lake engaged the attention of the party for the morning, after which the railway cuttings to Parham were examined, and the students embarked for Kingston stocked with specimens and information. The richness of the back townships as a field for the mineralogist and geologist may be judged from the fact that no less than twenty five specimens of minerals, besides numerous interesting rocks, were collected on this short outing.
