ARRIVAL OF THE ALGONOUIN.

Very Fine Boat.

plates were cut between the bulkheads, and the steamer was taken asunder. The two sections were towed by six tugs, the rear section being placed stern forward, and they were six days in going through the system of canals upon the Lower St. Lawrence, and up to the marine railway at Ogdensburg, where the bow section arrived on June 6th, and the other section the next day. New rivets were made to take the place of those that were cut when the vessel was taken asunder. The bow section was taken out of the water upon the marine railway first, and then shored up to allow the carriage to pass back into the water, when the rear section heavier, was allowed to remain stationary, and the other, being lighter, was adjusted hydraulic jacks. When in position it was ready for the insertion of the new rivets, which were placed in the very holes from which the other ones were cut, and when the work was completed no one could tell, from the external appearance, that the steamer had been ever cut asunder. The boat arrived here on Sunday and is loading iron rails at Portsmouth for the west. She will run this season between Kingston and Port Arthur or Duluth. The entire cost of the Algonquin will be about $127,000. She is a freight boat, but her cabins are more elegantly fit ted up than any freight boats upon the lakes. Additional strength is given to the steel plated sides of the Algonquin from the peculiar plan of her cabin and officers' quarters, which plan was designed by Mr. Kirby of Detroit, one of the best marine architects along the line of the lakes. Her engine is one of the most improved Scotch pattern, and is stronger and more powerful than that of any vessel of her capacity upon the lakes. It is a triple compound engine, and indicates one thousand three hundred and fifty horse power. Her total length is 253 feet, and her draft of water. when fully laden, is 19 feet, with ballast 81 feet. She was rated at Lloyd's 100 Al. She is foreign bottom and British registered, coming into Canada free, with the right to ply on the lakes with

The Late T. F. Egbert. T. F. Egbert, actor, known to many Kingstonians, died on June 20th at Lockport, N.Y., of paralysis. Mr. Egbert's right name was Egbert Fairchild TenEyck. He was born at Watertown, N.Y. Mr. Washington, D.C., in 1867. He had been in Augustin Daly's company, Mary Anderson's and Mrs. Scott-Siddons. Later he was leading man for the Criterion company, under the management of DeWolf Hopper and F. F. Mackay. Since that time he had managed his own company, with his wife, Kate Glassford, as the star. On March 19th he was stricken with paralysis in his dressing room. His recovery was at first considered very doubtful, but he got so strong that he was able to take short walks with his wife. On June 19th he took stroll, but next morning was again stricken and died. His illness entailed heavy expenses and, as the funds were low, a local minstrel organization, the "Big Four," gave him a benefit which netted something over $200. He also received financial aid from the actors' fund. The interment occurred at Rahway, N.J.

Health Preserved.

Is without doubt, the jewel of great price, and the one least valued. Disregard of symptoms that clearly indicate abnormal action of the liver, stomach or bowels is nothing less than criminal. Health through neglect too often vanishes like a "Will O'the Wisp. and the anxious seeker secures but pain and disappointment for his labour. No aid towards the preservation of health can surpass Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. These pills, being composed of vegetable substances, exert their remedial action without the evil effects too often following the use of pills containing mercury. For all bilious disorders they will even prove a positive specific. Hamilton's Pills are sold by all dealers in me dicine and by Polson & Co., Kingston.

His Ruling Passion.

Talking of museums, that small boy who has a mania for picking up things and labeling them and putting them away in a cupboard, has been at it again. There can be no difficulty in foretelling his en-He'll end up a millionaire in the dime museum business, with perhaps the distinguished honor of being an expert on freaks. He may be sensible after all. It has frequently happened that somebody who has always been considered a crank and out of his mind has saved up something that has become of great value. Just think what a lot of money a fellow might have got if some old ancestor of Elizabeth's time had saved all the spoiled pages and roughly handled manuscripts of Shakespeare and handed them down to his children and his children's children. Perhaps the idea ought not to be encouraged. There are so many little things that may become valuable that only a man with a few miles of storage room at his command could be safe in beginning the job at all. But this young museum manager is getting on. The other day his little sister ran a piece of splinter so deep into her hand that the family had to send for the doctor to get it out. The operation was carried on with closed doors so far as the children were concerned, but they were all huddled just outside listening at the keyhole. Presently they heard somebody

"Thank goodness! It is out at last!" The museum fiend opened the door and rushed in. "Don't waste it! Don't waste it! Give it to me for my museum."

And it is now in his museum labeled, "No. 641-Piece of a tree taken out of my sister's hand. The stains are real blood.' -San Francisco Chronicle.
