A Year's Experience

After nearly a year's use of SIMSON'S LINIMENT, I have proved it to be what I supposed at first it was. An excellent liniment to have about a stable. I have used it in cases of cuts, galls, bruises and sprains on my horses and in every case found in to give relief at once, cleansing the cuts and galle so that they heal rapidly, and reducing | themselves up in four : (1) More seats and the seres, as in cases of sprains and bruises, du a short time.

Nothing has presented itself to me that so effectively relieves and prevents the horse distemper.

I have also found it of very great serrice both in my own family and in the families of my men in cases for which it is intended to be useful.

LONDON'S SHOP-GIRLS.

HELEN CAMPBELL ON THE CLERKS IN GREAT ENGLISH STORES.

The English Law Concerning Over-Hours And How it Operates-Needs of Shop-Girls-In Many London Stores a Uniform Size of Waist Required.

Correspondence of the Inter-Ocean, I'm not willing and my brother as well. It's the customers—the lady customers—that wouldn't stand it. It's them you've got to talk to.

Once more it is woman who is apparently woman's worst enemy, and London sins far more heavily in this respect than New York, and for a very obvious reason, that of sharply defined lines of caste and the necessity of emphasizing them felt by all whose posiclerks were sitting realize that fro.n eleven to fourteen hours service daily might well be punctuated by a few moments on the bits of board, pushed in between boxes, which do duty for seats, and be glad that an opporgo to the shop where its outward tokens are most profuse.

A clerk found sitting is simply embodied llows it is an offender against every law of ropriety, and thus it happens that seats are slipped out of sight and exhausted women smile and ask, as the purchase is made, "And what is the next pleasure?" in a tone that makes the American hearer cringe for the abject humility that is the first condition of success as a seller.

Even the "best shops" are not exempt from this, and as one passes from west to east the ratio increases, culminating in the oily glibness of the bargain-loving London brother of Whitechapel, or any other district unknown to fashion.

however, is a merely outward phase. The actual wrongs of the system lie deeper but are soon apparent. For the shop girl as for the needle-woman or general worker of any description whatever overtime is the standing difficulty, and a diffi-In its properties than Iron an act of parliament forbids the employ. ment of any young person under 18 more than eleven hours a day makes small difference. Inspectors can not be everywhere at once, and violations are the rule. In fact the law is a dead letter, and the employe who finds himself arraigned for violation is as indignant as if no responsibility rested upon him. A committee has for months been doing self-elected work in this direction, registering names of shops where over hours are demanded, informing the clerks of the law and its bearings, and urging them to make formal complaint. The same difficulty confronts them here as in the attempts to reduce overtime for tailoresses and general needlewomen; the fear of the workers themselves, that any complaint will involve the losing of the situation. And thus silent submission as the rule for all, any revolt bringing upon them instant

In a prolonged inquiry into the condition of shop-girls in both East and West end the needs to be met, first of all, summed far more liberty in the use of them; (2) better arrangements for midday dinner, on the premises if possible, the girls now losing much of the hour in a hurried rush to the nearest eating-house; (3) with this, some regularity as to time for dinner, this being left at present to the caprice of the manager. who both delays and shortens time; (4) much greater care in the selection of managers. A fifth point might well be added, that of free afternoon each week. This has been given by a few London firms, and has worked well in the added efficiency and interest of the girls, but by the majority is regarded as a wild and very useless innovation.

The first point is often considered as settled, yet for both sides of the sea is actually in much the same case. Seats are kept out of sight, and for the majority of both sellers and buyers there is the smallest comprehen sion of the strain of continuous standing or its final effect. It is the popular conviction that women "get used to it," and to a certain extent this is true, the strong and robust adjusting themselves to the conditions required. But the majority must spend the larger portion of the week's earnings on the neat clothing required by the position, and to accomplish this they go underfed to a degree that is half starvation. It is this latter division of shop-girls who suffer from varicose veins brought on by long standing, and from many other diseases the result of the same cause, yet till women who come as purchasers to the shops where women are employed realize and remember this re form under this head is practically impossible. The employer knows that his trade would suffer were it done away with, and thus buyer and seller form a combination against which revolt is impossible.

The inquiry brought one fact to light, which, so far as I know, has as yet no counterpart in the United States, and this is that in certain West End shops, every girl must conform to a uniform size of waist. this ranging from 18 to 20 inches, but never above 20. fall or short, fat or lean, nature must stand aside, and the hour glass serve as model, the results simply adding one ready ranged against the girl. The matter of regular meals has also far less attention than is necessary. Dinner is a "movable feast." The girls are allowed to go out only two or three at once, and often it is 3 o'clock and even later before some of them have broken the fast. Though there is often room for tea and coffee urns. the suggestion seems to be regarded as a dangerous innovation, holding under the innocent seeming a possible revolution. The thing that bath been shall be, and the obstinate mide-bound conservatism of English shop-keeper is beyond belief till experience has made it certain. Few employers consider this matter. The majority ignore it as beneath consideration. The question of suitable floor managers is really the comprehensive one, including almost every evil and every good that can come to the shop girl whether in east or west end. Here, as with us, the girl is absolutely in his power. He governs the whole system of fines, one uncomfortable but ne cessary feature of any large establishment, and injustice in these can have fullest pos-real nasty, you know, and if they happen not to like a girl they stick on fines just to spite her. You see we're in their power, and some of them just have to show it and bully the girls no end.

"And worse than that, they are impudent too, if a girl is pretty, and often she don't dare complain for fear of losing the place, and he has all his own way. This department's got a very fair manager, and we all; like him. He's careful about fines and plans about our dinners and all that, but we're better off than most. The manager does what he pleases everywhere."

These facts are for the West End where dealings are nominally fair and where just below the International Bridge. It is wages may, in some exceptional cases, run | said Kimmick was recently prevented from as high as eighteen shillings, or even a committing suicide in Buffalo and it is pound a week. But the average falls far | believed that he jumped into the river with below this, from ten to fourteen being the suicidal intent. the sum. This, for the girl that lives at home, represents dress and pocket money, but the great majority must support themselves entirely. In the East End it falls sometimes as low as three shillings and sixpence (84 cents); the girls club together, huddling in small back rooms, and spending unless with exceptionally keen consciences, they find what is called "sin" an easier fact than starvation, and so the story go s on, and out of greed is born the misery which at last compels greed to heavier poor rates, and thus an approximation to the distribution of the profit which should have been the workers.

Here, as in all cities, the place seems to beckon every girl's ambition of something beyond domestic service. There are cheap amusements, "'penny gaffs" and the like, the "penny gaff" being the equivalent of our dime museum. There is the companionship of the fellow worker, the late going home through brightly lighted streets, and the crowding throng of people, all that makes the alleviation of East End life, and there is, too, the chance always possible of a lover and a husband, perhaps a grade above or many grades above their beginning or their present lives. This alone is impulse and hope. It is much the same story for both sides of the sea, and here as in most cases where woman's work is involved it is with woman that any change lies, and from their effort that something better must Health Preserved. Is without doubt, the jewel of great price, and the one least valued. Disregard of symptoms that clearly indicate abnormal action of the liver, stomach or bowels is nothing less than criminal. Health through neglect too often vanishes like a "Will O' the Wisp." and the anxious seeker secures but pain and disappointment for his labour. No aid towards the preservation of health can surpass Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. These pills, being composed of vegetable substances, exert their remedial action without the evil effects too often following the use of pills containing mercury. For all bilious disorders they will even prove a positive specific. Hamilton's Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine and by Polson & Co., Kingston.
