THE DAILY WHIG.

"Opifer per Orbem Dicor."

IS THERE DISUNION? The conservative press affects to have discovered evidence of disunion in the ranks of the ministerial party in the Quebec legislature. The idea is built upon the recent friends in regard to the Megantic election Mercier desired to hasten matters, in order | policy of liberality and brotherly kindness, to remove as soon as possible disqualifica- as characteristic as it was usual of Mr. Pur. tion from Mr. Whyte. He did this because | cell. But the courts refused to take he felt that the judge trying the case had | this view of things, and for a season Mr. taken an extreme view of the law, and ap | Macmaster was in his glory. Then Mr. plied it as it was not intended to be applied. Purcell appealed the case to the supreme Mr. David, M.P.P., suggested the deference of action until certain particulars, not then | the sessions of the house. He seemed to had, were forthcoming. The amendment | feel certain of success, and success he cerwas not carried in the house, but it was in | tainly did have. On technical grounds, rethe committee on privileges and elections, garding the time of the trial and the limitaand this circumstance is taken as an indi- tions of the act, the appeal was sustained, cation of a want of harmony between the | and Mr. Purcell's claim upon the seat con. premier and his supporters. Such a view of firmed. Though this was a particularly the case may give consolation to the opposition, and to this end it will be encouraged. The fact may be, however, that the action of Mr. David and of the committee may have had the concurrence of Mr. Mercier. He may have agreed, on second thought, that it was best to have all the evidence it were possible to secure in order that the house might not be charged with proceeding hastily or unjustifiably. The whitewashing of a member of parliament is at any time a delicate operation and calculated to provoke the sharpest criticism. The Megantic case will not be an exception to the general rule.

MR. PARNELL.

The position of Mr. Parnell is just now a particularly trying one. Through theaction of Mr. O'Donnell, inspired as is suspected by unworthy motives, he has been forced to defend himself from imputations most injurious if not unjust. It would most mightily please the London Times to establish its impression that the nationalist is a murderous party, but it has given countenance to crime, that its leader is so deeply involved, personally, in the offences of his countrymen that a knowledge of the fact would drive him from public and forever destroy his influence. His opponents will not accept his denial that the letters to which his name was attached, are forgeries. They say that simple denial of a charge so serious will not do.. There must be a judicial or parliamentary inquiry into The Str. "MAUD" will tenve Folger's Wharf his conduct. Well, it will be remembered that an effort was made last year by the Irish party to secure the appointment of arparliamentary committee to investigate the Times' charges, but the government re. fused to grant the enquiry. At the recent local improvement plan. Am I to infer trial Attorney, General Webster, who appeared for the Times, stated that he had in his possession proofs sufficient to convict | be taxed as the property is worth? This is Mr. Parnell, Mr. Davitt, and others, of conspiracy to murder. If so, it is his sworn duty to bring them to trial, which Mr. have only to pay the regular taxes. Mr. Davitt challenges him to do, and the Pall | Gunn, I believe, gave right of way through Mall Gazette says the Salisbury ministry his property, so there is very little to buy. must either prosecute Mr. Parnell or dismiss Attorney-General Webster. It is no longer an optional matter with Mr. Parnell. | build a house on it, as the property has lain He need not ask for trial, but the govern ment must give it to him. That's the position into which the hot headed attorney. general has forced it.

A DOUBTFUL ISSUE.

The bucket-shop bill is being defied by one commission house at Toronto. The members or agents of it think they havedevised a scheme by which they can conduct their business without any interference of the law. The methods are only changed in one respect, namely, that the transaction is not completed or booked in Canada but in Buffalo or New York. The order for the to be enlightened. -J. C. SWAIN, Rideau purchase of provisions, or grain or stock, on | Ward. margin, is sent on to the head office of the firm and handled by it, and the commission house claims that it cannot be prevented from doing this any more than the telegraph company can be hindered in the handling of an ordinary dispatch. That the law officers have a doubt about the liability of the alleged offenders, under the provisions of the Abbott bill, is evidenced by their appeal to the minister of justice for enlightenment. His reply is not all assuring. He briefly says he does not know the merits of the case, and is not in a assistance of a man in a punt, who arrived position, therefore, to offer an opinion; in on the scene about five minutes after the any event he has nothing to no with the administration of the law, such being a duty of the attorney general of the province. begins to dawn on people that talk like this is the surest indication bucket shop men can have of the weakness of the act. Mr. Thompson were sure of the perfection of the law, or of its ability to cope with cases like to that of Hanrahan & Co, of Toronto, | vests. There is a special lot of silk hair he should have no hesitation in saying so, seeing that it was the government of which he is the legal pepresentative that passed the law; but he trims and he dodges.

a repetition here of the experience had in federal government refused to remove, with the result of destroying the usefulness of the temperance act and of bringing it into contempt. The future action of the authorities will be watched with interest. It looks to some people at present as if the Abbott bill is not what it was cracked up to be, and that it was not passed by parliament with the ardent desire of doing much

PURCELL IS SAFE.

The privy council has refused to re-open the election case of Keunedy v. Purcell, and the latter will now be able to rest easy and enjoy the honors of a member of the house of commons for the remainder of this parliament. This has been a remarkable case, especially for its fluctuations of fortune. Purcell first had the satisfaction of defeating Mr. Macmaster, the legal terrier of the conservative party, but was unseated and disqualified for gross political immorality. The idea Mr. Purcell's counsel desired to convey was that some of the money transactions, to which the judge hearing them took actions are the gramming and amount of his I you bear more not intended as violations of the act against corrupt practices at eleccase. When it came up in the house Mr. | tions, but were carried on in pursuance of a court, and, pending its disposal, attended goading decision, it would have been accepted by most people as final. Not so Mr. Macmaster. At great expense he has carried the issue to England and argued it before the privy council, and he has been emphatically sat upon. The privy council declined to meddle with matters over which it had practically no control; as one judge pertinently put it the council had no desire to issue an order in the name of her majesty, if it could, of the execution of which it had no guarantee. And so Mr. Macmaster will have to nurse his wrath and disappointment for two or three years, then to seek a fresh collision with Mr. Purcell at the polls, or some far off field for the gratification of his vanity. Meantime Mr. Purcell will do well to so conduct himself as to win the favour of the people. He had better change his election methods, too. They'll stand remodelling.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR-

A Taxpaver and His Complaint, KINGSTON, July 7 .- (To the Editor) should like to get information on a subject which greatly puzzles me. Not long ago the council passed a resolution to open up Sixth street in Rideau ward and the finance committee was ordered to provide the funds. Not long after, in the council, it was quashed by Ald. Gildersleeve and a few others who want to have all the streets opened on the local improvement plan. Now the aldermen of the down town wards know that they will not want any streets opened, for they have got none to open; if they had things would be different. Knowing this they are opposed to open any in other wards, while I am told our aldermen, that should advocate the opening of the streets, sit in the committee meetings and never say a word. Now, sir, I want Ald. Gildersleeve, or some other alderman that is opposed to the opening of this street, to explain this we are to pay for it ourselves? While we are paying for it are our taxes to remain the same as they are now? Or if we build are we to what I want explained. Other streets have been opened that have cost ten times the amount this street would, and the people Now, sir, I have some frontage on Sixth street, and it comes in the middle of the street, and unless something is done I shall there long enough idle. Then it will cost a great deal more to open the street up. do not see who can stop me from doing so. Or if I thought some of these penny-wise and pound foolish members would leave the board, or the corporation would sell out to the Folger Bros. or men of their stamp, I would wait a few years longer. But while these men that are so penurious and keep the city back are in the council it will be the sleepy old city of Kingston. I don't mean to say they are penurious in everything. In small matters they are, but when it runs into the thousands they are reckless enough. There would have been houses all along that street now only for the paltry meanness of a few aldermen. Any information will be gladly received as I should like

A Smart Young Man. KINGSTON, July 10. - (To the Editor): noticed in your last night's issue an accident in a boat. Your informant evidently got things a little mixed, as the young man did not require anybody to help him back to the boat, and was not in the least danger of being drowned. He actually swam around and picked up the articles which had fallen from his pockets in the descent, and was just going to dive to look for his hat when he preceived that article slowly coming to the surface. After recovering which he climbed over the stern into the boat and rowed about to pick up the sail. With the accident, he managed to ship the mast and took a sail over to the island to apologize to his affianced for his inability to keep his engagement i.e., of going to church.-Yours, AN LOOKER.
