A newly arrived immigrant from Ireland had saved enough money to buy a good silver watch, but had not acquired sufficient dexterity to take care of it. He let it fall one day, and damaged it so seriously that it would not run. Therefore, he took the watch to a jeweler, and asked him how much it would cost to have it repaired. The jeweler put his glass on his eye, looked

Rules the world, for given a people amongst whom liver complaint, dyspepsia, or indigestion is the rule, rather than the exception and you will find a people without ambition, progress or prosperity. How Elephants Disport Themselves. The elephants had their bath and a game of ball at the Zoological garden the other day. Empress and Jennie with shrill trumpetings dashed into the big pool and enjoyed themselves like two schoolboys out for an afternooh's swim. Empress was first in the water, and Jennie soon jumped in after her companion. They rolled over and over, climbed on each other's backs and plunged together below the surface, coming to the top with snorts of delight and shooting out from their long trunks great streams of water. Keeper Pendergast stimulated the sport by casting two inflated bladders into the pool, with which the elephants sported for a long time, catching them and throwing them at each other's heads. When the keeper thought that the fun had continued long enough he prodded the unwilling beasts out with a long pole. Then he threw a score of inflated bladders on the brick pavement surrounding the pool, which the elephants pounded with their feet until all of them had complaint, then Carter's Little Liver Pills | been exploded, a proceeding in which they are a specific for sick headache, and every appeared to see almost as much sport as in
