TWO IMPORTANT POINTS.

But War Would Hardly Occur-Kingston and Sacketts Harbor Antagonistic.

Watertown Times. Within the wide course of all this talk about retaliation, in Canada and the United States, it would be strange if some editors and other people, not knowing what else to think of it, talked of war or the possiwith a large attendance. - The last of the bility of war, for that is the one subject 1,200 cords of wood, banked here during the upon which the nonsense of mankind is most winter, was taken away last week by the easily moved, and even those who know perfectly well how nonsensical it is will still picture in their minds what lively times we should have, in this northern border region, in a war with Canada, for that is what it would be more than with Great Britain. Sacketts Harbor and Kingston would resume their antagonistic attitudes of the year 1813, at the cannons' mouths, and would suddenly become two of the most looked-to and talked-about places on the whole continent! And Uncle Sam might deplore his rashness in selling the old war ship that had been rotting on the stocks seventy years at Sacketts Harbor for $457 two or three years ago, for if she still stood there and hostilities were to break out the old vessel might be launched now and be in about as good condition as most of the vessels, at present constituting our navy. On the whole it isn't much more preposterous to imagine the New Orleans as not having been pulled to pieces but plowing the billows of Lake Ontario,
