Prof. Webster Makes an Investigation That Opens the Eyes of the Residents -Skeletons in Various Stages of Preservation Evidently-Prehistorie Mound

Builders. I no people of Floyd county, la., have often speculated as to the contents of a group of forty curious looking mounds on the farm of John Serimger; but none of them had curiosity enough to investigate until Professor Webster took the work in hand on his own account. The Scrimger farm lies just north of the pretty village of Charles City, and is one of the most beautiful sections of the state. On the eastern part of the farm is a long, low ridge, running directly north and south, on top of which are the mounds, some forty in number, about three feet in of these mounds and found the skeletons of thirty people, he thinks of a different race from any of the prehistoric remains yet unearthed in this country. Just how long the ridge and mounds have been there Mr. Scrimger can't say. Neither can the oldest settler, and neither can the Pottawatomie Indian traditions which run back many cenbuilt by human hands is pain from the mathematical regularity with which they are arranged, and the hardness of the soil composing them, which is packed firm, like a stone, while that of the virgin prairie in the neighborhood is soft and yielding.

The skeletons found by Professor Webster are in various stages of preservation, some quite solid and others crumbhing to dust, while in one mound there was nothing but a bed of ashes. All the dead had been buried in a doubled up position, the kneel being crowded on the lower jaw, and the head of each carefully laid toward the east. While the femur bones show that most of the skeletons are those of people about 5 feet 7 inches tall, there are four the original owners of which must have been fully 7 feet tall. The skulls are those of a race of very inferior beings. The tops are abnormally thick, and the frontal bones slope abruptly back from the eyes, while the lower jaws protrude forward so that the under teeth come outside of the upper ones. In general contour the skulls resemble those of the prehistoric mound builders found in Ohio, Indiana and Wisconsin. Most of the skeletons found by Professor Webster show marks of fire, as if the flesh had been burned from the bones before burial. Another strange thing is the entire absence of anything like personal trinkets, or implements of war or of the chase, as are generally found in eastern mounds. The bones of animals, showing that the friends of the deceased had celebrated their interment with funeral feasts, are also missing. The only thing thus far unearthed in the lowa mounds, aside from the skeletons, is a lot of broken pottery of crude design and make, including one nearly whole vase or urn of archaic workmanship, which Professor Webster now has. - New York Sun.

Butterflies Going South.

Just now the butterflies are going to the south. Millions of them may be seen flying eastwardly. They come southwardly; striking the gulf they turn toward the east, in order to reach Florida, it is said, but how instinct guides the little winged travelers. thus is unexplained. They are generally a bright yellow, and fly along, sipping now and then from the honeycup of some wild flower. Great bands of them may be seen, like so many broad ribbons stretched in the air. As we were returning from a wild flower hunt they gathered upon the blossoms which we held in our hands, and some of them were delayed on their eastward journey by being carried even into the house. August is the month for this golden travel, and in early spring they return again.

> Mexico's Improved Government. John Glunz, a Fort Scott merchant, just returned from Mexico, says: The country is perfectly quiet and orderly, the present Mexican government having brought order out of former troubles, and in no country are the laws better observed. Of course the common people are illiterate and poor, but they are a grandly polite people. There is an absence of public accommodations, but every house is open to strangers. The government is doing all it can to encourage immigration, and large quantities of improved machinery are being brought in for mining operations, under a special dispensation of the government, which admits it duty free. The people all appear to feel the necessities for some extraneous force being brought to bear upon the development of their resources. In my opinion the opportunities and the conditions are all splendid for the investment of American capital, and I do not know where one can go and secure larger returns for his money.—St. Louis Republic.

Better Than Diamonds. A poor man and his wife emigrated to the Cape of Good Hope, and arrived there with little money and no prospects. The husband knew how to make aerated waters, and he spent all his money in getting some material for that purpose Then he left his wife with friends and started for the diamond fields, encountering great hardships, but getting there at last with his stock. He built himself a little shanty and began making and selling the water, succeeding so well that after four months he returned to his wife with 800 gold sovereigns hidden in a belt under his shirt. He has made a large fortune in the business since. - New York Sun.

Galveston's Artesian Well. The contractor who undertook to bore a series of artesian wells to supply the Galveston water works, for which he is to receive $80,000 if successful, recently struck his first well at a depth of 747 feet. Boring was at once suspended, and preparations are in progress to sink a ten inch strainer the entire length of the water bearing stratage sand. It is given out that when this is done, and the well thoroughly developed, it will probably yield from 400,000 to 500,000 gallons daily.-Chicago Herald.

A Chapter in a Baseball Man's Life That Reads Like a Romance. An advertisement recently appeared in a St. Paul paper, informing John Slone Barnes, formerly of Toronto, that he would learn something greatly to his advantage if he would call on the mayor of St. Paul. John Sione Barnes is the manager of the St. Paul Baseball club, and of course his life, like that his already chronically joyful career, he went to the mayor's office and was handed a John Slone Barnes, care of the Worshipful Mayor of Manager Barnes bound envelope applying his manamanagerial eye, over to the mayor again, requesting him to read it, so that there could be no possible doubt that the manager of the St. Paul Base-

letter the mayor read said, in substance, that the solicitors of John Slone Morrison, Esq., of Cumber Hill Wood, parish of Aughloo, county Tyrone, Ireland, desired to inform his nephew (Manager Barnes) that his uncle was dead, and that he (Manager Barnes) had become possessed by the will of their late gland at any time to attend to the settling up of the estate. After Manager Barnes had recovered from the first shock of his good fortune, he said that he was born in his uncle's house and was named John Slone, after him. He had remailed the old gentleman copies of papers containing accounts of those in which he carried off the palm of victory. Manager Barnes says he does not intend to give up his baseball interests in this country, but will probably go to England for "a bit of a lark," and then come back and settle down in St. Paul. When Manager Barnes left the mayor's office he looked as happy as though the St. Paul club had made sixteen home runs on a one base hit.

The mansion and estate are valued at $200,000, so this bit of luck is worth $300,000 to Manager Barnes.

ON THE TURF.

Baldwin's stable of runners has already won about $70,000.

Linden is not to be trained again this season. The accident to him in the Sheepshead Bay handicap was evidently a serious affair. Maj. P. P. Johnston, president of the National Trotting association, has been elected to a judgeship. His predecessor in the presidency was also on the bench. Elkwood has been blistered and Dry Monopole is to be fired, so that neither is likely to race again this season.

Johnny Murphy says Maud S. is in better shape now than ever, and is anxious to have her sent to beat her record.

Governor Stanford has refused $25,000 for his great 2-year-old filly Sunol, by Electioneer, that made a record of 2:25 on Aug. 11.

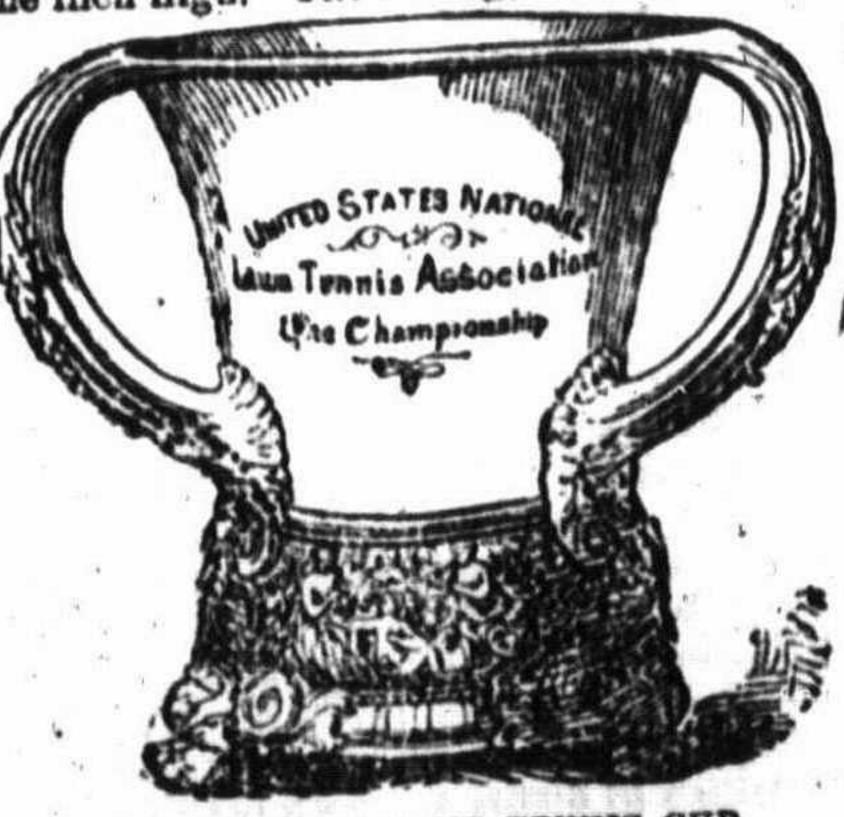

country will probably be that of Messrs. J. A. & A. H. Morris. Wyndham Walden is the trainer, and the new firm have made an enormous number of entries for 1889 and 1890. Fred Littlefield will be the jockey. Senator Hearst has a claim on this youth for the remainder of 1888.

The National Horse Show association of America will hold their annual exhibition at Madison Square garden, New York, from Nov. 5 to 10, inclusive. The association has determined to return to the standard bred classes, abandoned last year at the solicitation of several breeders, and additional prizes are now offered for roadsters or non standard bred animals. The prizes aggregate over $15,000 in value.

The crack light weight jockey, Barnes, is not open for an engagement just now. R. Tucker has a legal claim on his services for this year and also for next year. Tucker effected a three years' contract with Barnes, paying him $2,500 for last year's services, $3,000 for the present season, while the figure for next year will be $5,000. In addition Barnes is paid for his mounts when riding for his own stable, and his compensation from outside mounts figures up probably in the thousands.

A Handsome Tennis Prize.

The international tennis trophy which will be won by this year's champion and which will not become his personal property until won by him for two years, is of solid silver, five inches high from the base to top of cover, and five inches at both the top and bottom. The bowl rests on four small silver feet about one inch high. The fluting, chusing and en-

THE CHAMPTONSHIP TENNIS CUP. graving on the bowl is odd, very finely done, and is odd enough to be attractive. The bowl is what might be properly called rim shaped, and has two silver handles, which are fluted and chased to be in keeping with the chasing and fluting on the other parts of the trophy. This prize is useful as well as ornamental, and is a trophy at which most of the tennis players look with the hope of capturing.
