although it is really John Joseph Killion built up his muscle there by knocking out his fellow workmen. His first fight was with Jack Daly, and he put Jack to sleep easily. In the summer of 1883 he took to rowing and competed successfully for the junior sculling championship at the national amateur regatta at Newark, N. J

'In the winter of 1883 he appeared as a professional pugilist in Boston. He knocked out Harry Allen and then fought a victorious battle with George Godfrey, the colored pugilist, who has just been knocked out in San Francisco by Jackson. He then fought a four round draw with Charles Mitchell and followed by another draw with Mike Cleary. After this he tackled Jack Burke, but the fight was stopped by the police and was never finished. Kilrain then took a rest; after which he went to Bangor, Me., and almost killed Jerry Murphy, who weighed 200 pounds and stood six feet one inch. In 1885 he knocked out William Sheriff, the Prussian, in two rounds, and in the same year fought a five round draw with George Fryer, a British pugilist, and punished Jem McGlynn, of New Bedford, Mass. In 1886 he put Hearld to sleep in the first round, knocked on Godfrey again and completely demoralized Tom Kelly in four rounds. In 1885 Kilrain had Growths removed from the nose and Catarrh cured, Scrgt. Quarno, South Barracks, Royal Engineers, Halifax, N.S.

Mrs. Wm. Swartout, Norwich, Ont., cured of rounds which was stopped by darkness to big. glove fights with Jack Ashton and Joe toric. It was one of the greatest battles ever known. It is said that if Kilrain had followed up an advantage in the fourth round he would have won easily.

Every one who has met Jake Kilrain in Great Britain was surprised at his gentlemanly bearing and quiet manner. The English have been so used to tough specimens of the sporting class that to see one who was modest or quiet in his conduct was a revelation. Jake Kilrain, however, has always beld a good reputation; in fact, he has been known as "the gentlemanly pugilist," His neat appearance, good clothes, and his tall silk hat, which he always wears, have become familiar to his acquaintances in this

In Baltimore, where he lived for nearly two years prior to his fight with Smith, he was not only well known, but won for himself universal respect. Kilrain's reputation as a trainer while he was still a resident of Boston becoming known to several prominent Baltimoreans, they decided that he was the man they needed to instruct them in the manly art, and, after a short canvass among merchants and club men, it was decided to have a Crib club similar to that in Boston, and a committee was sent over to the Hub to secure Kilrain for a trainer. The club soon had a large membership and Kilrain was installed. The result was soon apparent in the manner in which the members took care of themselves physically. He is a good judge of human nature. He specimen of manhood in Johnny Murphy, of Boston, and had him with him most of the time. Murphy was such a diminutive fellow that the Crib club members looked incredulous when the big man told them that he was a clever featherweight fighter, capable of knocking out any of the Baltimore lightweights. To test matters, Billy Young, a fair lightweight, was matched to spar Murphy a few rounds with small gloves. The fight took place at the Crib club before a select few, and when it was over the little presented a terrible appearance. Two days after the fight the two principals and Kilrain were arrested, and, after spending a night at the station house, the three were put under bail. Kilrain's next effort was with a selected scholar of his school, whom he matched with a member of the Baltimore Athletic club. In this contest his man got done up in short order. In a prize fight at Point of Rocks between Pete Lally and Al Hartman, two Baltimore middle weights, Kilrain officiated as timer. In this fight the principals and spectators were naked, as they had to swim a stream to reach the fighting ground. He trained in and near Baltimore for his fights with Jack Ashton, Joe Lannon and Frank Hearld. On one occasion Kilrain and Murphy were both training, and went to Druid Hill park for a run. On reaching the high service reservoir Murphy donned his sweater and started to run, when son of Erin who was at work near by remarked to Jake that "he ought not to let his son make a fool of himself;" and when Jake started off the man dropped his shovel and yelled out to him, "Sure, and you are a bigger fool than your son." In both clubs he was a great favorite, his peculiarity being his modest demeanor and gentlemanly bearing. Naturally he is one of the best authorities on sporting events, and is exceedingly entertaining, as he can baseball scheme to A. G. Spalding. Mr. Lynch had traveled extensively in all of the principal cities of Australia and was greatly impressed with the love the people harbored chief out door recreation was cricket, and but few of the people knew the rudiments of cricketers, was surprised to note that catches were made of fly balls. After a study of the people and inducements offered in the way of grounds Mr. Lynch suggested that an Australian tour would be a profitable undertaking. After due consideration Spalding decided to make the tour, and accordingly Mr. Lynch was dispatched to Australia to make a thorough investigation of the facilities for conducting games on the mid sea continent and to arrange all the details of the journey. When he ceturned in the spring the work of organizing two teams to ments had been made to play several games of cricket and football with local teams care was taken to select baseball players who were also proficient in the other two games. After looking over the Chicago club the following players were selected: A. C. Anson, captain; E. Williamson, Fred Pfeffer, Thomas Burns, James Ryan, Frank Flint, Martin Sullivan, Robert Pettit, Mark Baldwin and Thomas Daly. This team is to be known as the Chicagos. The other team, which is to be called the Picked club, includes the following players: John M. Ward, captain; Edwin Hanlon, Detroit; M. Tiernan, New York; Fogarty, Philadelphia; Comiskey, St. Louis; Fred Carroll, Pittsburg; Wood, Philadelphia, and Mike Kelly, Boston. Negotiations are now being made with Caruthers, of Brooklyn, and McPhee, of Cincinnati. All these players are bound by strict contracts to conduct themselves as they would were they playing in the League or Association clubs. As cricket will form one of the features of the trip Joseph A. Rogers, of the Peninsular Cricket club of Detroit, has been selected to captain the cricket teams. The work of studying the game is being rapidly pushed by all the players. A number of them will be accompanied by their wives, among whom will be Mmes. Anson, Williamson and Ward.

The first game of the trip will be played in Chicago as early in October as is convenient. It will be a farewell game to the Chicago admirers of the sport. The next will be played in Milwaukee; then come Des Moines, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, Stockton, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Between these cities the aggregation will travel by special trains. It is likely that a warm reception will be given them all along the route.

Nov. 17 they will begin the ocean voyage from San Francisco aboard the steamer Alameda, which has been chartered for the voyage to and from Australia. The vessel owners have agreed to make the trip in twenty-

The clubs will stop at Honolulu. where two games will be played, one between players selected from the aggregation and local club, and the other between the two American teams. King Kalakana is expected to grace both games with his presence. Auckland is next on the list, and then comes Sydney. After a series of cricket and baseball games here the clubs go to Melbourne, Adelaide, Brisbane and some of the smaller cities. The same route is traveled on the return trip, stops being made in the cities previously

A number of people, including correspondents, artists and physicians, will accompany the clubs on their tour. The Americans expect to create a social as well as athletic sensation.—Chicago Tribune.

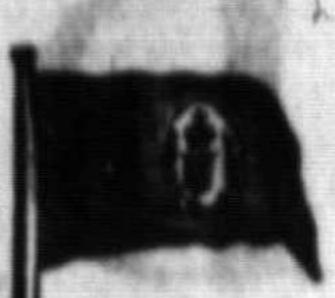

VICTOR E. SCHIFFERSTEIN.

What Malcolm W. Ford Thinks About the Californian Athlete.

For the past two months amateur athletic circles have been on the qui vive on account of the records credited to Mr. Victor E. Schifferstein, the great Californian amateur athlete. This feeling has been enhanced by the fact that Mr. Schifferstein is now competing in various games in which he cannot help showing his speed in running and activity in jumping, provided he is up to his Pacific coast form. Athletes who have competed in both California and the east say that the climate in San Francisco is far superior for athletic purposes to that found east. Taking this into consideration, quite a number of men of athletic experience equal his western records when competing in the mid-A glance at Schifferstein's 'records reveals two wonderful performances, viz., running 100 yards in 10 seconds and clearing 23 feet 21% inches in a running broad jump. Both of these were accomplished on the same afternoon, which puts Schifferstein in the ranks of the foremost sprinters and jumpers of the world. As to his amateur standing, there is a great deal of discussion. He has been charged with competing with H. Bethune, the celebrated professional sprinter, in a 100 yards race. This charge ought not to be noticed, for although he ran with this professional, it was in no sense a competition, for he merely coached Bethune in the attempt of the latter to lower. a record. Another charge is that he has resigned his business position to train for athletics, and that the Olympic Athletic club, of San Francisco, pays him a salary to represent them in competition. This, if true, would disqualify him as an amateur, but the charge has not been substantiated, and until it is all who have the best interests of amateur athletics at heart will be glad to have Schiffer-MALCOLM W. FORD. stein compete.
