Crawford he went into business on Princes street. At the end of three years, in 1849 the partnership was dissolved and Lestage went so California to seek his fortune the gold fields. He had been connected with the fire department, had been instru nental in establishing the first hook and ladder company, was elected captain and remained as such in office for three years. Becomin issatisfied with California he sailed for Australia in the brig Dazzier. Lancing in New South Wales he visited a gold mining region on the fourin river, where he lived for eighteen months. In this brief period he prospered. Proceeding to another gold mining section in Melbourne he remained two weeks. His next point was Ballyras, pretences. Whether this is true or not, the and here he made only enough money in the constables, who thought he was trying to mines to clear expenses. After seven years' sojourn in Australia he salled with two others for the Fiji Islands, where they carried on extensive speculations with the na-Lestage made money in this business, but on many occasions narrowly escaped being murdered. He learned the Fiji language, can talk it fluently, and is well acquainted with the customs and methods of the savages. At the time he was in the islands the Roman Catholics and Wesleyan Methodists established missions. Giving up the Fiji island trade he went to New Zealand, then to New South Wales, then to San Francisco. On landing the first man he met was a Kingstonian, J. Boyle. He returned to Kingston in 1886, and has lived here since.

François Lestage figured in the rebellion of 1837-38, and was first lieutenant in the Dundas volunteer artillery. He was with his corps when it went to Hamilton to guard the jail there, full of prisoners. He was also stationed at Chippewa until the enemy opposite them. During the time his corps stopped at Chippewa they discovered that the American steamer Carolina, plying between Niagara Falls and Navy island, was carrying munitions from Canada to the enemy located on the island. The steamer ran over route three or four times daily. Commodore Drew, Capt. Brier, R. N., and Francois volunteered to go to Navy island and cut away the American steamer. When they got there the boat was not in sight, but they afterwards found her at Port Slasher. When they neared the steamer pistol shots were fired at them. They climbed on the boat, cut her away from her moorings, and then set her on fire. As they receded from her the flames burst out, and very soon she drifted over the falls. No lives were lost by the fire. Those on board got away from the burning steamer in small boats.

As a young man Francois is remembered as being very fashionable. He was a great favourite with the ladies, and was obliged to attend all the parties got up in his day. In these assemblages he took a prominent part, and was exceedingly popular. He never married, because he always desired to be one of the bhoys.

The young man refused to give up his sweetheart or to postpone the wedding.

> The good people of Sandy Creek were unused to seeing young men so lavish of money as was Vandermont, and when it became noised about that his supplies had been cut off at home several of the merchants with whom he had contracted debts got their heads together and determined to have a settlement before the wedding. Vandermont went out among some of his acquaintances whom he had entertained so royally, but he was unable to find one who would accommodate him. This was mortifying, and he walked a short distance out the village. Constables and creditors were watching his movements and followed him. It is said that there was a warrant out for his arrest for obtaining goods under false pretences. Whether this is true or not, the escape, surrounded him in the woods. Then he drew a revolver from his pocket, and, before anyone had time to interfere, placed it against his left breast and fired. Death was instantaneous. The news quickly reached the village and caused the wildest excitement. When Miss Matteson was informed of her lover's death she fainted, and physicians who are attending her say they fear her reason is dethroned. Young Vandermont's parents were notified by tele-

COMMITTEE MEETING STREETS'

Need of Drains-Threatened Suit For Dam ager-The Street Railway.

A regular meeting of the streets committee was held last evening. There were present the chairman, Ald. Wilmot; Wilson, Muckleston, Adams and Redden. The engineer reported on the communica tion of Dr. Hooper, asking that a drain be opened on the hospital grounds. The cost vacated Navy island on the American shore | of deepening and covering it is estimated at $600. The matter was laid aside until the city solicitor's opinion was secured. It was recommended that the government be requested to assist in arranging the outlet of the Barrack street drain. A communication was read from W. Hyland, of Westbrooke, in which he stated that his wife had, while walking on a board walk on Princess street, in Williamsville, been severely injured. The accident was caused on account of the walk being defective. Mr. Hyland intends holding the city liable for damages.

Ald. Wilson answered Ald. Fenwick's questions regarding the street railway as follows:

1. Are the cars run from the northwest part of the city to the car stables? Ans. Occasionally. 2. Are the rails in good repair and flush with the streets? Ans. Not quite. 3. Are the cars run from 6.30 a m. to 10 p.m. and every half hour? Ans. The cars run from 7:30 o'clock in the morning to 11 o'clock in the evening and every 15 min-

4. Is the entire track in as efficient and safe state as provided in act 19 of the bylaw? This question was referred to the city solicitor.

Change-The Remarks of Trustees to the Effect That Certain Other Trustees Are Dedging Their Duty-What Say the People?

lating to the change was given and those present seemed to be heartily in favour of it. During the interval rumours were cir culated to the effect that at the special meet when the board should have begun busines the trustees were in the library there were sary, but when the meeting opened in the board room there were only seven. "We'l have to wait, Mr. Chairman," said a trustee. "I am willing to stay all night," said Horn. The trustee who retired was Mr Dunlop. and it was said he did not agree with the change, and did not wish to be the only one to vote against it. The seven members pre-Williamson. The absentees were Anglin, Conley, Gaskin, Savage and Tracy. While the trustees waited Dr. Fee moved about the room in a very uneasy fashion. He was gry. He enquired, "Where are the men who at the last meeting of the board promised to support Massie's motion?" They were not at all brave or they would have come to the meeting and expressed their views for or against the change. "The public should know," continued Mr. Horn, "that the business of the board has been done this year, all the way through, by eight men, whilefourteen should have done it. Mr. Massie said he would not run away from the meeting as Mr. Dunlop had done for any amount of money. He would have faced the music, and voted and spoker just as he felt. Mr. Allen broke the suspense by arriving at 8:20, and taking the place of Mr. Dunlop. The following motion was then submitted :

Moved by Mr. Massie, seconded by Mr. Arneil, that whereas the public school act provides that, by resolution, school boards may order the election of public school trustees to be conducted at the same time and place as the municipal elections, resolved that elections for school trustees be conducted at the same time and place as the municipal elections, and that the city clerk be noti-

The motion was carried unanimously. The board adjourned at 8:30.

The Defects in the Building. The Central school is in a bad state. Mr. Wilson, chairman of the board, and Mr. Power, architect, made an examination of it yesterday. They found that in three of the rooms rain had come in through holes near the chimney. When they reached the fourth story they could see daylight through several places in the roof. There was a hole near one of the windows facing Montreal street through which the light came. Some of the ceilings are disfigured by the water. There was also a copstone broken in a window over the caretaker's rooms. This appears to have been broken recently. In the north end of the building another copetone is broken. There is another defect in the building, -the floors of some of the rooms are not made so as to prevent sound from getting through them. Some steps will likely be taken by the school property committee to see that the needed repairs to the school are made at once.

The Work Progressing Slowly. Mr. Wilson stated last evening that the erection of Williamsville school was not progressing as fast it should and the delay was caused by the carpenter. The mason work was done. Mr. Kidd said the fire hall in Williamsville, now occupied by some of the pupils, was not lighted enough. The sooner the school was ready for the scholars the

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Justice to Eminent Cauadians. KINGSTON, Sept. 28 -(To the Editor) have just read your editorial in Saturday's atitled "A National Loss," and canyour timely article, which exactly expresses many others, both as to the general subject and the particular instance. I think the more self-respect, when Canadian institutions, largely endowed by Canadian liberality, should in filling positions of honour and responsibility, show a greater appreciation of the worthy sons of Canada instead of passferior articles, but simply justice and fair play. There can be no question that Prof. Roberts is admirably qualified for the duties of a professor of English Literature. His past record as an able and inspiring teacher; his unflagging industry and energy; the excellent original work he has done, which has won for him, at twenty-eight, so high a reputation on both sides of the Atlantic and made him, more than any man living in Canada a representative to the world of Canaadian Literature; his own published articles on literary subjects; and last, but not least, the highest testimonials from such undoubted literary authorities as Clarence Stedman and others, put this matter beyond a doubt. Many of us would have been proud to hail the appointment of Professor Roberts as a ing staff of Queen's. The policy of preferring a Canadian was followed in one of the recent appointments; why not in the other also, in a case where experience in teach ing the subject was added to natural fitness? The trustees were well aware that among many Canadian friends of the university there existed a strong desire that Queen's would honour herself by giving honour where honour is due, and showing a generous appreciation of the claims of one who, despite all drawbacks, notably that of distance from great literary centres, has done his country such credit in the literary world, one whose very example should be a moral stimulus to our young men! The trustees have chosen, doubtless for reasons that seemed good to themselves, to disregard these claims and disappoint the hopes of those who looked for a more generous policy, and they must bear the responsibility. Their action should on no account prejudice in any way the successful candidate who is, of course, in no wise, responsible. But it cannot tend to strengthen the sympathy of those Canadians whose love of justice and native excellence is stronger than their regard for any particular institution; nor can such an example encourage our young men to devote themselves to the arduous pursuit of literature, so precarious and often so poorly rewarded It will probably involve, also, as you remark, a "national loss," for, if Canada shows so little appreciation of deserving and patriotic sons, she cannot expect, however strongly attached they may be to their native land, always to retain them within her bounds, to be an honor and a benefit to the country which they naturally belong. - Yours, &c., FIDELIS.

Failed to Connect. KINGSTON, Sept. 26. - (To the Elitor): -I notice in a recent issue of your paper an account of a fashionable wedding in an adjacent village, in which it is stated that Dr. --- of Pittsburg, Penn., uncle of the bride, officiated. Perhaps it will be a kindness to those most interested to inform them that, if the above statement is correct, they are as yet no more married than if the bailiff of the nearest division court had "officiated. Only ministers resident in Canada can solemnize the ceremony of marriage in this province. If the matrimonial experiment in this case, therefore, has not proved a success, there is still a "locus poenitentia" for the culprits. -- Yours, &c., LEX.

AT HYMEN'S LALTAR.

Mr. R. Mangan-Wiss Ellen Shortell.

A very pleasing event in Pittsburg on Sept. 17th was the marriage of Richard Mangan to Ellen, only daughter of Patrick Shortell. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. P. Deshauniac, of St. Barnaby's church, Brewer's Mills. The bride was attired in an elegant brown travelling dress. Miss Kate Mangan attended the bride, and James Shortell acted as groomsman. Tho the wedding was a private one a number of friends were at the church to see the cere mony. After the wedding breakfast the happy couple left for Toronto and Niagara Falis. The bride was the recipient of many elegant and expensive presents from her friends and those of the groom.

Selon's Picture of the Crucifizion. There is now on exhibition in Mr. Olkhe's window, on Wellington street, a beautiful colored steel engraving of the above mentioned picture. For clearness of cut and brilliancy of coloring we have seldom seen it equalled and never excelled. The varied expressions of officials, spectators and mourners are given with a vividity and energy fascinating in the extreme. The blaze of silvery light falling upon the great victim of Jewish fanaticism, and upon him who at the eleventh hour became conscious of his evil deeds, the zig-zag flash striking the temple, the approaching gloom, all tend to inspire the beholder with a feeling of deep admiration if not of awe. The engraving was purchased in London in 1866, and only four colored copies were struck, after which the plate was destroyed; it is therefore of considerable value.

Owing to circumstances it was never framed till the present date, when it was entrusted by its owner to Mr. Olkhe, who we have much pleasure in saying has done his work with an efficiency and skill, which would be creditable to anyone, no matter where, in his line of business. In fine we have to say that we trust that many citizens will avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing a downright good and soul-stirring
