COMMON SENSE TALK. The Week is free from political bias, and its opinions on the settlement of the Manitoba railway difficulty, will therefore have the greater weight. It says : It is impossible to deny that Sir John A. Magdonald's letter disclaiming, on behalf of the Canadian government, any control over the Canadian Pacific ratiway company, and treating the question as one to be settled on its strictly legal merits, is exasperatingly unsatisfactory. The Dominion government, having agreed, with the Manitoba government to extinguish the C. P. R. monopoly and having, with the sanction of parliament, compensated that company for the less that monopoly, has surely placed itself un der moral obligation to give effect to its promise and its legislation, in the spirit as well as in the letter. It would be absurd to expect that the province of Manitoba would quietly submit to lose, even for single season, the fruits of all its agitation and outlay, in consequence of the discovery by the legal advisers of the company whose exclusive rights have been extinguished, of an unrepealed clause of somewhat doubtful meaning and intention in the General Railway act giving them special power of ebstruction. It can scarcely be doubted that a few words from Sir John to the leading members of the company would have convinced them of the folly of entering upon fresh contest in which they were sure to be worsted in the end, and which could not fail to leave behind it a legacy of ill-feeling, if it did not lead to consequences still more deplorable. In a word, it seems clear to the Paris, Covent Garden, London, and the prin- unprejudiced, non-legal mind, that the moral right is with the government and people of Manitoba, and that, should the C. P. R. contention be sustained in the courts, the fact would but add one to the many illustrations of the old maxim, summum jus summa injuria. What the C. P. R. authorities can expect to gain by the move, beyond a fresh harvest of unpopularity and possible reprisals, it is hard to conjecture. They can scarcely be sanguine enough to hope that another year of monopoly of the trainc can be secured by such means.

> The idea that the issue should be sent to the Supreme court, that the government cannnot interpret the law which it formed, is not anytoo acceptible in view of theembar rassment such delay would occasion to the railway builders. Public opinion is decidedly against the Canada Pacific company in the crisis it is precipitating through the ob stinacy of President Van Horn.

GOLDWIN SMITH'S VIEWS.

The article appearing in the November number of The Forum from the pen of Prof. Goldwin Smith will have special interest to Canadians. The professor's position on the annexation question is intelligently embodied in the following statement :

"For my own part I freely confess that not only recognize the ultimate decree of destiny (the union of the United States and ecures to each state, and which allows free play for local character and local self-deveof this continent, for the purposes of internal peace and external security, could be anything but a blessing to all who dwell in Without being animated by any iconoclastic or revolutionary feeling against the British aristocracy, I should be glad to see Canada finally released from its influence, which appears to me to be productive of nothing but flunkeyism, while it interferes with the education of the people in the political principles on which a commonwealth of the new world must rest."

That Mr. Smith is an able and influential nan no one will dispute. He writes linglish in its purity and never fails to command respect. That he does not command support is due to the fact that, like many a great man, he has his hobby, and that in its advocacy be is not at all successful. Others | Hamilton Spectator. quite is observant as he is, and quite as eager to read the signs of the times, do not see that "the action of the unifying forces has been so visible and so manifestly increasing as to lead them to "anticipate ultimate un ion with the United States." But it is for every one to entertain what opinion he chooses, and if Mr. Smith is sure of a thing, even the surrender of this dominion to the United States, the sinking of all present and reasonable ambition as to ultimate destiny of this country, it is not to be supposed that the rest of the community must manifest a similar weakness. And the more one considers the anxiety of Mr. Smith for annexation the greater the confusion of his friends and admirers in seeking to make his opinions appear to be harmonious. He violently opposes home rule for Ireland because the political independence of the island would be followed by a reduction of the empire's power if not the disintegration of the empire itself. And how he can reconcile that idea and the annexation of Canada with the United States is too much for the intellectual light which the average man enjoys. As member of the unionist party he became associated with Britain's social upper crust the aristocracy which resists the schemes of the peasantry on any account; and, as champion of separation he longs for a relief from the English flunkeyiem for which he should be above such contradictions. They do not mark him out as a philosopher.

HERE'S A POINTER.

Kingston, and it is moved to say that the iron ore trade has not been ruined by the restrictive policy of the government. notes two facts that a great deal of prospecting will be done along the line of the K. & P. railway during the winter, as announced by the WHIG, and that several thousand tons of ore have been mined during this seeson and shipped to the United States-and argues from this that any restriction in trade is a matter of personal rather than political policy. Now the Intelligencer does not attach the correct importance to the question of prospecting. What does it mean? Simply that the capitalists are anxious to locate the ore, to purchase the property on which it is found, and make every preparation for the mining of it should circumstances give warrant for the same. To be sure considerable ore has been shipped to the United States and marketed notwithstanding the heavy duty upon it, but the export of it is of small account in the opinion of experts and capitalists compared with the immense quantities which would be sold and sent out of Canada were there no barriers on trade and commerce between the United States and Canada. But some people may say that the iron ore should not be sent to the United States? No? Well, what's to be done with it? Canada has more than she knows what to do with now, and every year there are discoveries of it, and the supply seems to be inexhaustible. And the United States has as much right to our ore as we have to its coal. The exchange of these articles is an absolute necessity.

A word in regard to the Intelligencer's reflection upon the people of Hastings, thus "The ores in this county are of as good quality as those in the county to the east of us; labour is as cheap here as elsewhere; railway and vessel facilities at Belleville, Trenton and Weller's Bay are not inferior to those at Kingston. What, then, is the reason that iron mining is dead in Hastings and flourishing fifty miles to the east of us There must be some cause. What is it?" Why press the painful question? The people around Kingston are living; the people around Belleville are dead. The national policy don't amount to much when the com munity is without thrift and business tact and enterprise. This is practically the pronouncement of the Intelligencer.

Lord Sackville West, British minister, has seriously blundered. He has been, by wily politicians, induced to give his opinion upon election matters, and as it compromises President Cleveland his position as the arrbassador of a foreign power is exceedingly unpleasant. His only excuse is that he wrote confidentially and as an act of courtesy. It is not at all acceptable. As a diplomat, in the exercise of his wit, he was not called upon to write on political matters to any one, under any circumstances. His usefulness is gone. Of that there is little

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Railway Schemes,

KINGSTON, Oct. 27 .- (To the Editor) : notice in the right hand lower corner of the first page of yesterday's WHIG a statement that a "decision" has been reached regarding the Kingston and Yarker railway. W R. Aylsworth, vice-president of the N. & T. railway, has notified the mayor that they will accept $75,000 bonus from this city, and build a connecting link from Yarker to Harrewsmith, and then use the K. & P. road. I want to inquire whether the rate-payers of the city will have anything to say in this matter? We have to furnish the money say about how much is to be raised, and for what purpose. A line from Yarker to Harrowsmith may suit the N. & T. RR. company, and some of the "Jay Gould's" who are manipulating the matter: but will it suit the ratepayers of Kingston? I trow not. Other parties are looking after their interests. Let Kingston do the same TAXPATER
