At the afternoon session, W. Gill, Kingston, presided. F. Gooch read a paper on the "Training Class" work. This subject afforded food for a good deal of interesting conversation, and was found to be a very useful part of the work. It was felt that a more thorough knowledge of God's word was needed in dealing with men.

F. M. Pratt, general secretary of the M. C. A., read a paper on "The Interesting, Kalisting, Educating and Organization Workers." At this stage the convention was reinforced by the arrival of E. Emerson, A. Jack, J. W. Cook, J. Strachan, H. B. Callahan, C. J. Graves, and G. H. White, Kingston.

G. D. Pound's paper on "What Religious Work should be carried on by our Associations," was very opportune and full of force and thought. Une of the leading sugrestions was to have the meetings for men

The fellow had been in the parlor to open venetian window, but finding that the outside sash had been placed in position he returned to the back entrance. He passed up stairs, rummaged through Mr. Adams' room, overlooking a revolver and some money that were lying on a stand. They were covered with a handkerchief. He then went to the back room, turned over some clothing and examined all the pockets of Mr. Adams' garments in a closet close at Dear sir, -The students of the Royal | hand. Miss Adams was awakened by the to was banded with the considered two Then the whispering was resumed near her door; a moment afterwards the lock was turned and a man peeped in. Miss Adams was frightened by this time, and, raising herself in bed, shouted "Robbers! Robbers !!" The fa.nily were spedily aroused. Mr. Adams jumped up, grabbed his revolver and ran into the hall. He ran plump upon the burglar, dressed in a long black coat, who raised his left hand, in which was a club, with the remark "Hello, hello!" struck Mr. Adams' arm, knocking him down. Then he fled down stairs. Mr. fired upon the fleeing figure. The police have been notified and are looking up the individual. Mr. Adams has a good idea who he is. His daughter thought there were two men by the whisperings, but Mr. Adams thinks otherwise, as the man he suspects has a habit of talking to himself, and this habit he seem not to have forforsaken on the present occasion. Then his voice, as he spoke to Mr. Adams, convinces that gentleman of his identity. He is an ex-convict.

Mr. Adams thinks he could have killed the burglar had he not come upon him so hastily. It would seem that after Miss crossed to the bath room, while confused, and coming out ran upon Mr. Adams as he emerged from his bed-room.
