Men Fighting Like Manines.

SPOKANE FALLS, W.T., Nov. 14. -A serimining camp in northern Idaho. Charles Garrett, coloured, and Joe Morgan, white, were engaged in an altercation. Both drew revolvers and opened fire. James Shannon, bystander, was shot and cannot live. William Lyman, another spectator, was shot through the shoulder, and Garrett's arm almost shut off. Morgan escaped. BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 14. - Robert Nubers, of Montevallo, employed William Shorbridge, lawyer, to collect claims against delinquent patients. The returns were not satisfactory, and the men quarreled. They finally agreed to fight with bowie knives in a darkened room just off the doctor's office. Removing their coats and shoes the men entered the room and fought blindly but desperately for nearly ten minutes. Neighgered into the office with blood streaming from a dozen gashes in his face and breast. Without saying a word he rushed down the stairs still clasping the gory knife in his hand. Lying upon the floor was Shorbridge, his head smashed in a fearful manner. The arteries of his neck had been severed, one eye had been gonged out, and his hands were cut so terribly that the fingers hung only by the tendons. The man was dead. Nubers after leaving the office ran out apon the street. He seemed to be crazed with pain. He staggered wildly until he reached store, where Albert Keenan, a negro, stood in the doorway. Without saying a word Nubers rushed at Leenan and struck at him with the knife. The negro finally dealt him a terrible blow upon the head and leaping over his body, ran into the street and disappeared. THIS IS HIS THIRD WIFE.

Mr. Chamberlain's Beautiful Danghter Not Much Pleased About Her.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The projected marriage between Miss Endicott and Mr. Chamberlain is not received with unalloyed satisfaction by the family of the latter. In addition to a stepson, old enough to go round making political speeches in the absence of his father, the young bride will have to take charge of a handsome stepdaughter, about twenty years old, fond of society, and very much displeased at the prospect of being deposed from the social leadership of her father's household. For nearly three years this young lady has practically managed her father's magnificent house at Birmingham, and has made herself very popular. It is pretty well settled that Mr. Chamberlain is to be made a member of the new cabinet on its approaching reorganization, and Miss Chamberlain had some hopes of reigning over her father's establishment in London next season.

Miss Endicott will be Mr. Chamberlain's third wife. He was first married to Miss Harriet Kenrick, who died in 1867. His second wife was Miss Florence Kenrick, who died in 1875. This gave rise to a report at the time that Mr. Chamberlain had violated the law of the land by marrying his deceased wife's sister, but as a matter of fact the young women were cousins bearing the same name. The loss of his second wife is said to have been a very severe blow to Mr. Chamberlain.

LOADED WITH ANOTHER'S FAULTS.

Recenting the Interference of the Home Secretary in the Management of the London Police - The Delight Which Warren's Resignation Has Occasioned -Fallure as a Writer.

LONDON, Nov. 14. - There is a sharp division of opinion over Sir Charles Warren's The radicals delight at his downfall. The tories are greatly disappoint ed. Their attacks on the police were aimed at Mr. Matthews, who would probably have been ousted from his post long ago but for the fact that the government feared the result of a bye-election in Birmingham. The radicals point out that Sir Charles Warren resigned on the eve of the anniversary of the riot in frafalgar square, caused by police mentioned in connection with the succession to Sir Charles Warren's post. The most likely candidate is Mr. Malcolm Wood, chief of the Manchester police, who greatly distinguished himself in connection with dy namite outrages. Howard Vincent, another candidate, was a failure as head of the detective department at Scotland yard. Moreover he would have to vacate his seat as tory member for Sheffield and cause an election. Lord Charles Beresford was actually offered the post when Mr. Henderson retired. He first refused, and accepted when too late. Since then there has arisen a strong impression that no military or naval man should be appointed. The new commissioner will not have control of the detective police.

Sir Charles Interviewed. NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The Herald's London correspondent had an interview with Sir Charles Warren regarding his retirement. John Murray invited the commissioner to use his pen, and he produced an article on the police, defending himself. The matter came up before parliament and the home secretary snubbed him, saying he was ignorant of a rule that no attache should write of his office without permission. This was tantamount to saying that siderably bronzed. In place of the military martinet, which he is represented to be in some quarters, the correspondent found a gentleman of courteous manners and amiable disposition, with much of dignity.

"Can you give me any details about your resignation ?" asked the reporter. "Not much," he replied. "You must understand that until government has ap pointed some one in my place I can say little. However, there is one thing I wish to be understood, that Mr. Mathews is speaking for the government, not for me. At present I am commissioner and responsible for the London police, therefore I may not speak."

"Can you suggest the reason of your rebeen the interference of the home office in the police department." "Is that of recent date ?" "It has been so for two years. The police have resisted this latter assumption | Odessa and was probably returning from Colonel Lamont will locate in New York | throughout, and when it came to orders | Odessa when she foundered. in the employ of a life insurance company, being written to us by the home office clerks it was a little too much."

"Were you not consulted?" "Not directly. A curious feature of the whole business was that the government, represented by Mr. Matthews, held me personally responsible for all the crime of London, and yet they made communications to my subordinates.

"You did not resign on account of the last

Whitechapel murder ?" "No, I sent in my resignation before the Kelly murder on the 8th of this month, immediately after Mr. Matthews' statement in the house of commons in reference to my article in Murray's Magazine. My resignation was accepted yesterday. That article

A Puff for the Ex-Chief of Police. NEW YORK, Nov. 14. - A London despatch to the Tribune says what is called Sir Charles Warren's resignation is practically his dismissal. When once the home secre tary had been allowed to lecture the chief of police in the house of commons for pub fishing an article in Murray's Magazine his stay in office became impossible. It has been for some time a question whether Sir Charles or Mr. Matthews should go. There has been friction ever since the Trafalgar square riots last winter. Then came dis putes respecting the detective service, and the resignation of Mr. Monroe, the head detective, followed by his transfer to the home office. Mr. Matthews has behaved badly throughout, and is perhaps the least competent and least popular home secretary since Spencer Walpole. Finally the differences between him and Sir Charles Warren became a cabinet question, and the cabinet, as usual, preferred to sacrifice somebody else rather than a colleague. "It only shows once more what weak things a strong government can do. The desire for Mr. Matthews' retirement is genuine and well-founded. The opposition to the chief of police sprang from no other cause than his doing his duty, and doing it thoroughly well. Complaint of him, because he was a soldier, was empty complaint. The serious attacks on him date from Trafalgar square. He knew his own mind about that business. Mr. Matthews did not know his. Sir Charles was determined to keep order. Mr. Matthews was for order one day and disorder the next. Perhaps there was a moment when the chief of police forced the hand of the home secretary; at any rate he completely defeated the agitators, whose howl of baffled rage is now

They have never ceased to pursue him. "There are not many things in the distory of the radical press more disgraceful than its campaign against Sir Charles Warren. It was a campaign of calumny. Others joined in it, notably such statesmen as Mr. Coneybeare, Mr. Graham, and Prof. Stuart, and the lowest types of irresponsible fanawill be a foot ball match in the Queen's | tics. When the Whitechapel murders occurred Sir Charles was held responsible for the failure to discover the murderer. These papers stuck at nothing, and they have triumphed. The cabinet consequently has the pleasure of reflecting that Mr. Coney beare has proved himself stronger than Lord | Cucumber and Roses for my hands. Drug-

have only to rail against their oppressor | The Little Things that fleet Canadianslong enough and out he must go. Sir Charles did his duty admirably, and London owes him an immense debt. His successor, whoever he may be, knows that if he does equally well he may expect the same fate. There is a fairly good prospect that the police of London will have to adjust itself to the wishes of the lowest class."

In Pursuit of the Murderer,

LONDON, Nov. 14.-No new facts of importance came out at the inquest on the latest victim of the Whitechapel murderer. If the police have any evidence they keep it back. Experts say nothing has done more to prevent the arrest of the murderer than excessive publicity. Every clue or supmoney elve kan been disnegad in print, wit the result that the criminal knew what wa being done, knew where suspicion pointed, and knew how to divert it. But as he probably does not read the New York papers many say the police are confident that they know the man who committed all the murders. They have an exact description of him, and are searching for him night and day, but have lost his trail entirely. They are confident, however, that he cannot ultimately escape.

THE STORMS OF ENGLAND.

An Unknown Steamer and All on Board Sunk-The Wreck of Vessels.

LONDON, Nov., 14 .- A severe gale has prevailed on the western coast. The steamer Galatea arrived at Falmouth on Monday night and reported that when between Start Point and the Eddystone light house she saw, about midnight, distress rockets fired from a steamer. She got within hailing distance, and was informed that the steamer was in a sinking condition, that her boats were smashed, and she required assistance. The fearful state of the weather prevented the Galatea from launching her boats, but she remained by all night, and until 5:40 o'clock when a heavy squall struck the vessels, and on the weather clear Sir Charles was inattentive, so he resigned. | ing the steamer had sunk. RUSSIA IS CAUSING ANXIETY.

Her Army In a Position to Do Most Effective Service Quickly.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14. - A despatch to the Herald from Odessa says that the extraor. dinary large purchases of grain, hay, and other army provisions, now being made here, as well as Podolia and in the district of Kieff, by a number of military attendants, are attracting the attention of German and Austrian correspondents. It is said that this is only a timely provision against the exigencies of a long and severe winter. At the same time the fact remains that the Russian army is now going into winter quarters on the front, and near the military lines of the western frontier, is sufficiently powerful to meet any untoward political event which might necessitate its instant mobilization either during the winter or in the early spring. Russia has, however, no intention so long as the present political situation endures of, in any degree, depleting her western garrison. In this there is no actual cause for alarm or for the pessimism of the Austrian and Hungarian press. Russia's present attitude is distinctly a waiting attitude, and for some considerable time it will unquestionably remain the same, unless some unforseen rupture should oc-
