OF FASHION.

New Garments in Seal Skin and Furs for Winter Wear-All About the Boas, Collars, Capes, Muffs and Scal Jackets Dear to the Hearts of the Ladies.

Boas, collars and shoulder capes made their appearance with the first frosty days autumn. The stylish boas are round and of ionable "set of fur." Russian sable boas are the first choice. Then, according to Harper's Bazar, are Hudson bay sable boas, black marten, black lynx, black fox, blue fox, black bear and brown bear and the light yellowish brown badger boas. The new plastron collars of long fleeced furs are round If you want the Driest, Cheapest and Best | and wide behind, wish the fronts pointed to Hard Maple and Beaca Cordwood Sawed or Un | becoming, and are made in all the fashion. and wide behind, with the fronts pointed to able long furs.

The new fur plastron, "Medici," is arranged with a reversible collar, which can be worn either lying flatly around the neck or in an upright position, as shown in the illustration. It is numbered with the most becoming novelties that have been introduced this season. Shoulder capes or pelerines are more popular than at any former season. Young ladies wear them because they are just short enough to disclose slender long waists, and older ladies like them for the protection they give the chest and shoulder blades and because they are easily put on and off.

FIG. 1-"MEDICI," THE NEW FUR PLASTRON, Short jackets with closely fitted long waists are the fashionable fur garments for young ladies, and for older ladies who retain their slenderness. These jackets are made of seal skin, of Persian lamb, or of leopard skins, and of two furs in combination. The plain seal jacket is the best choice for careful buyers, and averages twenty-five inches in length. The back is left open below the waist line, and laps there to adjust itself to various tournures. In the annexed illustration is shown the "La Rus e." an Alaska seal short coat, fastened on the shoulder with two large seal buttons. In this same illustration may also be seen the "Siberia," a fine Russian bear collarette and boa combined. The newest short wraps of sealskin combine a jacket and mantle or cape; for instance, a jacket of sealskin has a cape front curving open from the throat, covering the coat sleeves, and going into the back forms from the shoulders down precisely as many mantles do.

FIG. 2-SIBERIA BOA-LA RUSSE JACKET. Long sealskin cloaks that cover the wearer from throat to foot are more nearly fitted to the figure than formerly, and are most often left open in the back of the skirt instead of having the fullness over the tournure, that BROCK STREET | adds so much to their weight.

Fashions in Gloves.

Tan, gray, black and white gloves are the only colors used in a fashionable woman's outfit, and it is quite possible for her to be well gloved with all her various kinds of gloves in tan shades, very dark tan color being used for the street in the daytime and very light tan for evening. Gray gloves are worn with gray dresses, as are black also; white gloves are now fashionable with white dresses, but light tan shades are oftener used, even by bridesmaids.

The undressed kid gloves of light quality, with corded backs, are the fashionable choice for visiting and carriage toilets, but beavier kid gloves have wide stiteling of self color. or of black, and are most used for morning walking toilets and with tailor gowns of cloth. Some of these are fastened by four large gilt buttons, while others are in the sac shape, without an opening at the wrist. Evening gloves are as long as ever, and again reach to the lower edge of the short sleeves; they are in mousquetaire shape, and must be quite plain on the back, being very simply corded there. The "drawn seams" with edges of the kid showing, are on stylish gloves, and are quite new on black gloves, showing white edges of the kid.

Ladies' riding gloves are now "tilburied," that is, faced double inside the palms and fingers, just like those worn by men, and they may be short enough to require but one button to fasten them, or long enough to require four buttons. - Harper's Bazar.

New Millinery Trimmings. Never were the trimmings used on hats and bonnets more varied than at present. Even ribbons, which have long been the most favored garniture, are displayed in an endless variety of new and beautiful designs and make. Watered ribbons are now superseded by rich ribbon velvets in all widths. There are many new and rich fancy ribbons, Oriental patterns on plain grounds of all the new shades, with threads of gold and silver woven in the patterns. These last are chiefly used as bands to the crowns of hats and bonnets, and are a pretty contrast to full bows of ribbon and velvet. Apropos of bows, an entire change has taken place; full, compact nent in this popular trimming. Sever for the new Harlequin felt hat is composed of two ribbons, one of each shade in the hat, the lighter laid within the dark, and both drawn up together into a handsome bow on the crown.

Mid-Winter in Montrent.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27. -Sunday and yesterday a characte istic November wind and snowstorm has prevailed at Montteal. The wind began from the northeast and attained a maximum velocity of 46 miles per hour. Snow began falling late in the evening and continued falling until about 9 o'clock yesterday morning, when it was blowing at a mile a minute steady, with a few gusts as high as 72 miles per hour. The snow piled up in great drifts and the streets had a midwinter look, sleighs making their appearance pretty generally, though the windswept many places bare.

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 27. - There is great rejoicing in Windsor over the decision of the Canadian Pacific to build a road from London, and property in the west end has taken a jump. From the conversation of Mr. Jennings, mechanical superintendent, with the town officials it is thought operations will be commenced here immediately, and that by the end of 1889 the road will be in running order. The question of giving a bonus if the road locates its division shops at Windsor is discussed. Chatham will submit a bylaw to the taxpayers on Thursday, asking for a bonus of $40,000 to the road.

A Chimaman Beaten and Robbed. MONTREAL, Nov. 27. -A brutal assault was made last evening upon a Chinaman named Sang Wah, who keeps a laundry at 328 St. Lawrence Main-street. About 5 o'clock two men entered the place, and while one of the ruffians set to work to beat the proprietor, the other riffed the till, and after securing $50 the scoundrels made off, leaving Sang Wah in almost a dying condition No arrests have yet been made, and the life of the injured man is despaired of.
