Therefore it does not encroach on the poor man's peculiar privilege. If the hidden stream of the captain's deep charity and beneficent wisdom could be fathomed have no doubt his present opposition to the railway by-laws would be found to be affeeted by the fact that the roads or the city might be obliged to take the barracks. Rather than see them forced to do this he would sacrifice the Montreal transportation company and have it acquire the barracks and save the city, and the railways that contribute to the city, any great expense. For the building and erection of a statue or pedestal in his honour I propose to open an office in some convenient place and receive subscriptions, and I will say for the benefit of the poor man, and the mechanic, to whom the Captain always alludes so pathically, that nothing over $5 will be accepted. # IN MEMORIAM.

Late Mrs. David Denison, Hartington. On Monday, the 19th, there departed from this life for a blessed immortality, the wife of David Denison. She had been a great sufferer for many months, but had borne pain with Christian fortitude and often with cheerful countenance so that her family should not know her sufferings. She was a member of the Methodist church and teacher in the Sabbath school until compelled by health to resign. On Wednesday her funeral sermon was preached by Rev. J. The two railways now projected will give | Fowkes from Ezekiel xxv. 37, showing that increased competition and lower freghts to God's children were often made to pass under the rod for some wise purpose, to us unknown, just as gold is refined in the furnace. The church was crowded, many coming from long distances. The casket and floral offering were very beautiful, and many tearful eyes showed the esteem in which the deceased was held. The choir sang impressively "Some Sweet Day Bye and Bye." The family meet sincere sympathy in their loss of a loving wife and mother. The remains were interred at Sydenham cemetery.

After thanks had been tendered to all who had contributed in any way towards the gratifying results of the evening, a verse of the national anthem was heartily sung and the last speaker pronounced the benediction.

PRAISE FOR MACKENZIE.

The Montreal "Star" Speaks About the Benefit of the Royal Military College.

It is rleasing to observe that the London correspondent of one of the New York journals speaks in very high terms of the Royal military college at Kingston and the graduates who have been selected to enter the Royal Engineers. The question is sometimes asked whether Canada benefits in any way by maintaining an expensive military institution at Kingston for the manufacture of cadets for the British army. But this is hardly the fair way to look at the subject. ()nly a very small proportion of the graduates goes to the old country, and even these are not necessarily lost to Canada. The experience they acquire through their connection with British regiments may be turned to good account for Canada when they have had a chance to show what they can do, while as for those graduates who remain in the country they would form a useful nucleus to fall back upon in case their services should some day be required. The establishment of the Royal military college was one of Mr. Mackenzie's ideas, and he is a hard-headed Scotchman who was in the habit of taking a practical view of things. It will no doubt be gratifying to the French-Canadian element to observe that the French Canadian graduates share the honors with their English competitors.

Yesterday was the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. William Mas sie, sr., Barrie street, and the children and grandchildren signalized it in a joyous way. The affair took the shape of a surprise party, The four sons-William, John, James and Robert-their wives and children, with few intimate relatives and friends, visited the parental abode and spent a number hours agreeably. The boys gave Mr. and Mrs. Massie valuable gold presents, while the grandchildren and daughters-in-law added their tokens of love. The venerable pair thanked Providence for the blessing they had enjoyed. Besides the personal gifts from the family there were presents from friends, one from a relative in Toron to who wrote a letter conveying kind regard and substantiating it by golden wishes
