In a Hurry.

This reminded another old veteran of a peculiar military dialogue he listened to in the course of one of the battles of the rebellion, I forget which. The soldier was going off the field too hastily, and the provost guard cried:

"Can't!"

"Wounded?" "No."

"Sick?"

"What's the matter?"

"I am scared, and want to go to the rear to-rally."-New York Tribune.

How She Mourned.

She was at a dance and musicale the other evening, dressed very handsomely in white satin. She wore black kids, however. "Why did you not wear white | b gloves?" asked a friend.
