CANAOA AND AUSTRALIA.

Principal Grant Interviewed at Winnipeg

-Trade Relations - The Pacific Cable. WINNIPEG, Dec. 19. - Rev. Principal Grant of Queen's University passed through here today. Speaking of the possibility of developing trade relations with Australia he said in spite of the fact that we have no means of communication by cable or direct steamship line some Canadian firms are finding buyers for their goods in Australia. The Canadian firms represented at the Mellaurne Centennial Exhibition said they were doing a good business which was sure to increase.

The Doctor said that he had no doubt of the ultimate success of the cable -cheme. The must of a message now is nearly $3 a word, and week a sable as was proposed would bring the rate down to 75 cents. The feeling in Australia is strongly in favor of the scheme.

"There is an immense world," he said, "to he developed, not only in Australia but in the groups of islands which surround it, islands teeming with undeveloped wealth."

AMERICAN CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY

The Feeling of the Pepe Upon It-The Progress of the Scheme.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—The Herald's Rome says Dr. Keane, Bishop of Richmond, who is also titular rector of the projected university at Washington, yesterday handed to the pope a collective letter written in Latin from the Catholic Biships of the Unit ed States, thanking the pope for his support that the work was making most satisfactory progress, $800,000 having been collected, while the ground on which the buildings will be erected has already been paid for. The bishops draw attention to the great importance of the university, which they believe will act as a bulwark against the rise of ration lism and free thought in America.

D. W. ALLISON, EX-M.P.P., IS A MAN OF GREAT ABILITY.

He Comes from Fine Old Stank.-By Meen Business Totl He Has amazzed a fortune-A Public Career That Has Been Most Creditables. A Useful Man Who is Hoped Long Years.

Napanes Beaver. No individual in the community has more numerous or stronger claims to be classed among the representative men of this county than has David Wright Allison, of Adolphustown. He is a branch of the U.E. levalist stock that first settled this fair land, and whose frugal industry loyalty made this province what it is. His parents were son and daughter of Benjamin Allison and Henry Hoover, who displayed their loyalty to British rule by leaving their homes and property at the close of the revolutionary war in 1784, refusing to live beneath a secession banner, and settled beneath the old Union Jack as pioneers of the township of Adolphustown. Their early struggles, the great privations they endured in hewing out a home in the torest, are matters of history and will be the glory cycles of time.

D. W. Allison owns and resides upon the heroes whose ashes repose beneath the spreading branches of its trees. And no of this spot of so great national interest.

His mother, who is about the only surviving representative of those who drew land under the U.E. loyalist grant, still resides with him, receiving every filial care and attention, and possesses her faculties in a remarkable degree.

Mr. Allison was educated in the schools of his native place, his studies embracing such subjects as are implied by the term "a sound English education." Some time after leaving school he entered commercial pursuits, and how successful his exertions have been is best learned by looking at the position which he now holds in the industrial life of the country. By his keen business tact he has amassed a fortune, which he best employs by promoting the prosperity of the community in the various active pursuits in which he is engaged. He is not one of those who, having wealth at command, is centent to sit down and horde the results of asurious interest. Every enterprise which promises to be of public advantage receives his encouragement and support, and where he brings his force and business skill to bear it is as a rule successful, financially. It has long since come to be recognized that Ontario has few shrewder, more enterprising or more successful business men than D. W. Allison, of Adolphustown, He has been extensively engaged in the manufacture of lumber and salt in the Saginaw Valley, Michigan, and has had an important interest in mineral lands. He is still proprietor of the valuable Saginaw mine in Marquette county, Mich. In addition to these enterprises Mr. Allison is engaged in farming upon an extensive scale, and is the largest land owner in the county of Lennox and Addington. He has also engaged extensively in shipping enterprises, owning at the present time four vessels. He supplied a large share of the funds to build the tidy little steamer Reindeer for the route to Napanee, though he has since disposed of his interest. Mr. Allison has been a consistent reformer and his public career, though brief, has been equally successful with his commercial record. In 1831 he was elected warden of the county and made an excellent presiding officer, assisting materially in the important work of consolidating the county debt. In 1882 he was elected to represent the constituency of Lennox in the parliament of Canada, and made a good representative.

Socially he is held in the highest esteem. He is an enthusiastic member of the Masonic craft, having received the highest degrees obtainable in this country. In 1876 he married Amelia Elizabeth Embury, a member of one of the oldest families of the township, and they have four children. He has erected on the shores of the Bay of Quinte, in a most picturesque spot, a palatial residence, planned and equipped with every modern convenience. Here his hospitality is unbounded, and his home is the centre of social life in that com

Mr. Allison has long been a consistent member of the Methodist church, and one of its most liberal supporters.

Some years ago he erected on the bay shore a splendid mausoleum of solid cut stone, which is nearly as indestructible. either by time or the elements, as it is pos sible to make, and there it is hope t the remains of himself and family may be placed when their career here is ended.

Mr. Allison is a useful man, and we hope he may long be spared in health, strength and energy to bless those around him.

General Middleton and Colonel Walker Powell were both seep upon the subject this morning. The general said : "This sort of thing must be put a stop to. Here we are to have done. The rules of discipline forbid the use of any language as that quoted, and policy requires that auggestions of the kind must be made in the proper way and through the proper channel." Cel. Walker Powell thought that Major Mayne had acted wrong if the reported statements were correct. The establishment of a permanent force of even 4,000 men would cost twice as much as did the whole must desirable to encourage the spirit of patriotism which led the people to offer their services for the defence of our country. We were not placed as England, and, therefore, did not need to maintain a standing army. It had been shown that we could manage our own internal affairs, and maintain law and order by the aid of the militia, and if it were not for these England would probably have to step in.

He said that Majors Mayne, Wilson and himself were guests at the debate of the Alma Mater society of Queen's university, and after the matter was closed they were asked to speak. The colonel continuing said : "The debate was wholly among the graduates and students of Queen's. It was another gentleman who advocated the abolition of the militia and the adoption of a standing force, not Major Mayne. Major Mayne did not say that the present force was inefficient and incapable. His remarks were on military matters generally. He suggested an additional naval force owing to the difficulty of defending the frontier on account of its extent.
