HE HELD THREE MEN AT BAY. For An Hour They Bodged A New York

Saloonkeeper's Revolver. NEW YORK, Dec. 25. - In a low dive at No. 1394 West Twenty-filth-street at 4.30 Sunday morning Alexander Gilman, a colored exressman, 29 years old, of No. 97 Crosby-George Carroll, the white proprietor of the

At that hour a man reported at the West Thirtieth-street atation that there was a riot in Carroll's saloon and that a number of men were killing eack other. Other Samfront of the saloon. The windows were smashed in and the door was broken and there was the wildest confusion inside. The glasses, bottles and a mirror behind the bar were all smashed to pieces, while the proprietor, in his shirt-sleeves, torn and bloody, stood upon the debris of shattered glass, with a 32-calibre revolver in his hand, as if waiting for an attack from some quarter. He did not know whether it would come from under the counter, where two men were, or from over the bar, where he had already shot Alexander Gilman.

The proprietor and eight people found in the place were placed under arrest and arraigned at Jefferson Market yesterday. A charge of felonious assault was made against Carroll. Gilman had been removed to the New York Hospital. Justice Ford held Carroll in $2500 bail, but when he was informed that Carroll had been robbed sixteen times and he was only defending his place this time bail was reduced to $1000 He was also placed under $100 bail for violating the Excise law.

Carroll is a stout man, slightly bald. He said that he had been robbed only two nights before and the contents of the till carried off. Gilman and the other colored man arrested entered his place late on Saturday night and played several games of pool. He wanted them to leave the place as they quarrelled among themselves. He finally told them he wanted to close up, and the men began fooling and chased one of their number behind the bar. Then another came behind and would not leave. He saw that it was "a put-up job," as he said, to rob him, and he sent his son-in-law to get the police. Then a third man tried to get behind the counter, but Carroll would not

The third man tried to jump over the counter, but Carroll drew his revolver and told him to stand back. Then Carroll turned his pistol at the men behind the bar and they crouched down on the floor. For an hour he kept covering the three men with his weapon, first the one over the counter and then at the men under the bar. Every time a move was made by any one of them the pistol was pointed towards him. All this time Carroll's relatives were out looking for a policeman to come along.

At last the man outside the bar, who was Gilman, got hold of a cue and raised it to deal Carroll a blow on the head. The cue struck the chandelier and smashed it. Carroll shouted to him to stand back, and, as he did not do so, tired one shot, which struck Gilman in the left shoulder. Just then one of the men behind the counter jumped through the glass of the show-window and escaped.

Carroll told the police as they took him out of the saloon that there was a man hadden under the window. The police went on to the station-house and then returned to the saloon, but the man was gone.

ACHECKERED CAREER.

Some Incidents in the Life of Captain Leon De Rathier Du Verge.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 25 .- The career of Captain Leon de Rathier du Verge, who, the cable announces, has killed Victor Stanwood, United States commercial agent at Madaguscar, has been a most remarkable one. he is descended from a wealthy French family, but his father was impoverished under the First Empire and retired to a small estate in Brittany. Young Leon graduated with high honors at l'Ecole Polytechnique, entered the Chasseurs de Afrique as lieutenant and served under Generals Boulanger and Roland. He then changed to the navy, and after seriously wounding a brother officer in a duel, severed his connection with the service and entered the merchant marine. He became acquainted with officers of the New York Yacht Club and thus secured the command of Vice Commander Osborne's yacht.

When the civil war broke out he enlisted in a Massachusetts regiment and served with marked distinction. He came to Baltimore in 1881 as captain of E. M. Padelford's yacht Nokomis. He settled here, and being a man of handsome face, fine figure and attractive social qualities, to the throat and | besides being an unusually fine linguist, created a social sensation. When Mr. Padelford sold his yacht Captain du Verge applied for a consular position, and was strongly backed by Governor Long and other prominent Republicans. He was given an African Consulate, and disappeared from the sight of his friends. He was reported dead, but subsequently a letter was received stating that he was serving as a colonel in the Madagascar army. His wife had, in the meantime, procured a divorce. A year ago he published a book on Madagascar, and he has since gotten up a syndicate of Bostonians to man and provision t e Solitaire, under his command, to go to Madagascar and opened up the unworked gold mines. Du Verge had no love for Stanwood, who held the position for which he had unsuccessfully applied.

> THE U. S. CONTRACT LABOR LAW. Alleged Violations at Detroit by Canadians From Windsor.

DETROIT, Dec. 25. - From the outlook now the evidence to be taken here by the Immigration Committee will prove a most important and valuable addition to the information already in the possession of the Committee as showing the necessity not only to provide means for the enforcement of the laws at present upon the statute books, but emphasizing the fact that the laws themselves must be greatly enlarged in their scope in order to afford the protection due to American labor.

The chief points to be developed here embrace the extent to which the importation of contract labor from Canada to engage in the various local industries and in the lumber business of the peninsula has been carried, and also the extent to which American citizens have been affected by the coming over the border of thousands of Canadians, many of whom live on the other side and cross the Detroit River night and morning on the local ferries.

The preliminary examination of witnesses Commenced yesterday and evidence was Canadian shop girls are employed in Detroit stores. Many work during the summer in Michigan and spend the winter in Canada.

Up to this time it was not thought that any men had been hurt, but Mr. Sinclair, recollecting that he had seen Sexsmith at work inside, ordered a search. ANOTHER STEAMBOAT DISASTER IN THE SOUTH.

Large Number Jamp Overboard and are Drowned Betatls of Suffering.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 25, -The steamboat John H. Hanna, from Onahita River with bered by the residents for thocks arounds in cold and rainy weather and the streets of the last night at Plaque Mine. It is stated the vicinity. It is estimated that $20,000 Capital abound in mud. Tradesmen's that of the 300 persons on board at the time of the disaster only fourteen are known to have been saved.

A special from Plaque Mine to The States says : The burning of the steamer John H. Hanna last night near here was one of the most terrible river dimeters that has ever happened in Southern waters. The loss of life was very heavy. About 30 persons perished in the flames and a large number jumped overboard and were drowned. Among the lost are Captain J. S. Holmes and First Clerk Samuel R. Powell. Their bodies have been recovered. Holmes' body va terribly burned.

Bob Smith, the old pilot of the J. M. White at the time she was burned, was a passenger on the John H. Hanna and was barned to death. His body has also been recovered.

One of the deck hands who escaped says there were about 100 persons on board, and that only about a dozen can now be found alive. The engineer and pilot were saved. All were burned more or less, some of them

It was just before Christmas day was being ushered in that the fine steamer was coming down the river. Several of the passengers were seated in the cabin having a merry time and with no though of impending catastrophe. Many of the crew and passengers were asleep when the fire broke out and spread with indescribable rapidity. The details of the suffering and death of some of the passengers are harrowing in the extreme. The boat had reached a point which was but a short distance above the town when a negro roustabout near the boiler room ran out to the deck and shouted that the boat was on fire. John Cullen, a stoker, was near the place at the time, and secing the flames bursting forth from the big tiers of cotton near the boiler ran hastily to the engine room and pave the warm. gineer Merriman took in the situation at a glance and at once sounded the alarm by blowing the steam whistle and ringing the bells. In an instant the flames shot through the cabin and over the sides of the cotton. enveloping the entire boat in fire.

Clerk Powell was upstairs at the time and when he saw the flames he heroically ran through the smoke which filled the cabin and tried to arouse the sleeping people. He kicked at the doors and in a short time almost everybody was awake.

Then confusion worse confounded appeared and the frantic people on the bout rain to different exits to make their escape, but the boat was piled high with cotton and the passageways were filled with smoke. Many dropped before they were able to get to the forward part of the boat and were dead when the steamer went down. As soon as the fire was discovered Engineer Merriman set the steam pumps working and tried to battle with the flames but, the fire swept through the boat like a blaze on a prairie and the engine room was soon in flames. Then, to add further to the consternation, a steam pipe burst and filled the place with scalding steam. Engineer Merriman was forced to abandon his post. and he and the stokers and others ran to the side of the boat and rushed through pell mell in order to save their lives.

As soon as the smoke and flames began to shoot up the sides of the boat Captain Jolles, the pilot, swung the wheel around and headed the boat for the shore. A full head of steam was on at the time and the boat was soon run into the bank. Before she did so, however, she was doomed. All of her timber was then furiously burning. When she struck the bank she bounded away again and swung around, drifting down as she burned. Them Capt. Jolles jumped out over the cotton ales and springing into the river swam.

The sight was a weird one viewed from the bank and the town was aroused. Floating cotton, charred timber and the debris filled the river, and many people was struggling desperately in the water for then nves. Some were able to swim ashore, bu' most were so Ladly burned or so thoroughly exhausted that they struggled but a few moments and sank to rise no more. As the burning boat struck the bank of the river the crew and passengers who had been able to reach the forward end of the boat sprang ashore, some with scorched faces and bruised limbs and many with scarcely any covering.

Among those who managed to get off were Capt. Holmes and Bob Smith, the unfortunate pilot of the ill-fated White, who was a passenger. Both were burned night. unto death, and the story of the manner in which they suffered is most heart rending.

When the captain jumped ashore he was horribly burned and in his frantic desire to be relieved from the pain he was suffering he buried his face and hands in the soit mud and begged most piteously for someone to help him. Smith was just behind and was laid out by the side of the dying captain. Nothing could be done for the suffering men and they died together on the river

Haque Mine was not slumbering where the fire broke out, and when the discovery was made that the Hanna was burning a most the entire town flocked to the river bank and watched her burn.
