Gen. Boulanger is rising higher and higher in public notice, and some of these days will ask his countrymen to secept him as their dictator. No country has so frequently personality conspicuous since bis removal from office and the army. He has had his ups and downs, his moments of exhileration and moments of depression. Some time since his sun appeared to be setting, but that was political heavens. A great crisis is impending. Any day the Floquet government may fall, and Boulanger's party succeed to power. But it can't rule France. Few men are both soldiers and statesmen. Boulanger is cer tainly not such and he may cease to be anybody once he ceases to be a demagogue.

It is so seldom that large bodies act LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I again desire to be your representative at fairly and honourably in the distribution edifice on Christmas morning, and an unus honour is paid to whom honour is due! It is not so long since the Royal Templars of Montreal were in pursuit of Hos. Mr. Mercier for his light reference to the prohibition movement and refusal to be called to account by the representatives of any local society. And now it is the Evangelical Alliance that tenders its heartfelt thanks "for the noble disposition that he and his cabinet have shown to meet the demands of of the temperance people for more stringent legislation,"and praying "that the Almighty God may guide the government of the province in the future as in the past in passing such measures as will promote the cause of temperance and redound to the credit of the government." Mr. Merojer has strongly circumvented his opponents. He has heap ed coals of fire upon their heads, and won | repeated (D. V.) next Sunday morning (those an unlooked-for victory. The assailants of the premier have been singularly silenced.

> And now that Mr. Dickey, the conservative candidate for Cumberland, N.S., has been re-elected to the federal parliament by an increased majority it will be interesting to enquire what brought that result about. His opponent was, on a former occasion as last week, a prohibitionist, and this is the way in which his friends subverted principle :

> polling booth and actually went up to vote. Had the trial gone on proof of the identity of the gentleman in black, as well as his avocation, might have sent a cold shudder over Mr. Dickey."

> Enquiry should again be made about the dark room and the operations in it. Were those which led to the defeat of Mr. Casey repeated in the case of Mr. Elderkin ?" Was the coloured individual again at work and how many votes did he bay?

> The votaries of fashion are going mad. They cannot be in their right minds, and continue to dress in a manner that is (1) suggestive of immodest thoughts and conducive to physical infirmities. The possessor of an attractive figure may feel happy in the exhibition of it with as little disguise as possi ble, but she is a rare one who has natural excellencies to submit to honest and pure and complimentary criticism. The female full dress is indeed startlingly conspicuous. In the light of recent experiences in Kingston we are bound to say that Broadbrim not at all extravagant in his use of language when he says it is the next approach to undress. The full dress of the ladies will surely admit of a change in the direction of com fort. Fashion can be carried to extremes in the matter of evening dresses. Common sense demands a reformation with all possible haste. The full dress of the day is prostrating morally and physically. The young women are risking too much by a blind adherence to its fashion. They would feel far better if they clothed themselves with a view to the concealment, rather than exposure, of their personal charms. would certainly move in a clearer atmosphere and have less to say to their family physi-

Presbyterian, deals with the pew question and holds that the freedom of them will not induce some people to attend church service regularly. He quotes the statement of Dr. Cochrane, that he has gone to people who were greatly exercised over the pow question, offered them free seats, and failed to get them to attend church. "There are by using Jelly of Cucumber and Roses. Iry some men," says Knoxonian, "who would it. Druggists keep it. Wm. A. on it during service. If a man wishes bath, it is hardly fair to say that pew rents the pews." There is a good deal of truth in The church is all right, but its members must bestir themselves, and when they do "the pew system," as Knoxonian observes, "will soon adjust itself."

Considering the tactics of the opposition torate of the county is pretty evenly divided between English and French speaking voters, and in the English Protestant sections the people were urged to vote against Col. Rhodes because he refused to condemn the execution of Louis Riel, and voted against an Orange incorporation bill in the Canadian parliament, twenty five years ago, and to the French Canadians he was reprepeople are very mercurial in their tempera- sented as a bigoted Protestant who had ment, very fickle in their support of leaders, | been selected for a cabinet position because very changeable in their loyalty to republican of his intolerance. The fight was a fierce institutions. And Boulanger gives them an one, in a conservative constituency, and opportunity for here wership and they are against the strongest man the party could fond of it. He has not ceased to make his summon to its aid. The return of the much maligned Rhodes is at once a testimony to the personal popularity of the man, and to the faith the electors have in his ability to serve them as a member of the government. Mr. Mercier took great chances in running a delusion. It never was so high in the a colleague in an opposition county, and Col. Rhodes showed his pluck in accepting the situation. They are, of course, the prouder to-day of their success.

A BATH ENTERTAINMENT.

Christmas in St. John's Church-The Service to be stepested Next Sunday. A large congregation, considering the star. of the weather, assembled in this venerable ual number remained to the Holy Communion. Thanks to the taste and skill of Mr. J. M. Wemp, and his band of faithful lady keepers, the decorations surpass in beauty. as was predicted, anything attempted in this line during many years past, and present a picture so pleasing that it will repay one to travel many miles to see it. One among many conspicuous objects inviting attention is a handsome cross and crown on the super-altar, formed of natural flowers, the handi-work of Mrs. G. Ferren, of Watertown, N. Y., by whom it is presented. The musical portion of the service, too, was not disappointing. So far from this, it was judged that the organist, Mr. Hart, and his choir, quite excelled themselves, and render ed the praises of G, and C, in a way seldom if ever equalled in excellence in this church. The offertory for the clergyman's benefit, as if none were missing from the service owing to the rain, was not far from double that of
