You can't tell how many it helds. A Naval Fight off Peru-The Sequel.

A partial explanation of Admiral De Horsey's interference in one of the numes rous "family quarrels" for which Peru is famous is given by a correspondent. 1. seems that some of the Br tish mercantile houses in Lima had asked that steps should be taken to look after the Huascar in the south, it having been reported that this vessel had committed some depredations on British interests, stopping the the royal mail steamers, and taking forcible pussession of a quantity of coal from on board an English ship in Pissgua. It afterwards trauspired that no such outrages had been perpetrated—that the coal belonged to a Peruvian citizen, who gladly accepted the price offered by the rebels-and that, when the mail steamer was boarded, and two Peruvian officers extracted therefrom, the occurrence took place in a Peruvian port, from whence the local authorities had fled, and the rebels were in unquestioned possession. Hursey was However, Admiral De unaware of these circum-Lima, proceeded south to look after the ram. A note was sent by the Admiral to Pierola, and received by the latter in Cobija about the 23rd of May, in which the Huascar is threatened with capture in case of interference with British interests, or retaining on board British subjects against their own rolition. On the receipt of this document Pierola called on deck the English engineers and firemen belonging to the ship, explained the matter to them and offered them their liberty. This was accepted by the engineers, who were placed on shore, paid extra wages and their passage secured in the mail steamer to Callao. The commander of the Huascar replied to the note of Admiral De Horsey, asserting that no acta inimical to English interests had been the Huascar was perfectly competent to

Neither of the English ships was sold in Kingston by Heath & Gunn, E. H injured by the combat. The Huascar, our informant says. was hit no less than Parker, and responsible druggists everywhere 70 times during the engagement. The handling and tighting of the rebel ram is said to have been admirable. The Shah would have entered Callao Bay on her way north, but was met by a steamer with the British Consul on board outside the harbor, and advised to keep on her voyage, ane thereby avoid any further cellision with the Peruvians, who, it is said, were prepared to give her a red hot reception before she came to Callao. -The Syracuse papers were telegraphed that the Kingston club were beaten at cricket. That is one way to win when beaten by nine wickets. - A man named Fowler was charged at the Torouto police court this morning with procuring an abortion by drugs on Sarah A. Lewis in November last. The case was remanded till Saturday.
