A recent advertisement in the Ottawa Free Press called a public meeting "for the parpose of organizing ... association of all liberal thinking men " to unite for the purpose of putting down all religious and national processions and displays other than the celebration of our national holiday." If only those who answer the above description respond to this invitation we fancy there will be some difficulty in organizing the city on the proposed basis. The "literal" element of the meeting will certainly object to putting down anything so concededly innocent in itself as a public parade, whother religious or national; and the "thinking men" will at oncescome to the conclusion that it can't be done. Repression of what in itself is harmless has never been characteristic of 'liberal thinking men." They are always ready to allow the largest latitude to every possible shade of opinion, and every legitimate expression of it. To such men the possible obstruction of the Queen's highway is the only inconvenience apprehended from a public procession. What it selves with this particular species of ditask of putting them down is assigned to "liberal thinking men. The Heralds of Halifax and London the less would seem to cling with about equal pertinacity to any slander for which they conceive an affection. Both of them are incessantly after the Premier with what they consider to be a very hot stick. The sea-board organ sticks to it that there has been a serious personal rupture between the Hop. Mr. Mackenzie and denied by each gentleman, and their respective disavowls generally creditedstand corrected over Mr. Fleming's own signature. But no matter. What can either party to an imaginary dispute be opinion is now generally entertained that for that, because all other military bands expected to know about it ? In fact, in the case in hand each supposed disputant Flushed with victory the Porte would confesses his utter ignorance of it. Their objections must therefore be overruled. and the organs' more positive testimony accepted. But we think the Halifax slanderer is outrivalled by its London namesake. Ample evidence has been furnished the latter in rebuttal of its wild charge that Hon. Mr. Mackenzie felonionaly murdered Thomas L. Hackett in the streets of Montreal, but all to no purpose. The courts may ultimately fasten the guilt on somebody else, but, even so, that will only be identifying the assassin that held and fired the revolver for the Premier, who is nominally responsible for the crime. Such are Tory tacties in some quarters. For any Berald to trumpet such monstrons nonsense is to Herald its own brazen and unblushing shame. No wender that respectable Conservatives have condemued the use of such outlawed weapons as the above, even in political warfare.

A JUDGE A CITIZEN.

Vice-Chancellor Blake has not escaped criticism for the active part he has seen fit to take in favour of the Dunkin Act in the Toronto war now waging over that measure, and the polling on which commenced this morning. He has been charged with inconsistency because of having, as is alleged, some time or other furnished some guests with wine at a watering place bearding house. On this point the Hon. gentleman has to be heard from, although, if it were to prove true, male of liquor by the glass at the bar, and Great preparations, in which both parmany who are not abstainers are in fa- ties joined, have been made for his reyour of the suppression of this practice. | captise,

It must be confessed, however, that those who abstain altogether would seem to be the most consistent advocates of the Act, and it may yet turn out that the Hon, Vice-Chancellor may class himself in this latter category. What we most object to in the strictures that have been passed upon him is that, as a Judge, he has no right to step into the arena of public discussion and espouse a cause on which the public mind is divided and undecided. This objection would be well enough taken in any political controversy, but in a question affecting the morals of the people and the abatement of an admitted public evil, a Judge has the right of any citizen to advocate what he may deem to The Juily British Whig. be an ameliorating measure. We cannot see how an interest in a movement, which is, at any rate, intended to issue in public good, is at all beneath the dignity of the Bench, or that an active participation, even in a contest to that end, is lancing of the scales of justice. Similar at the station. objections were urged against Judge Jones, of Brantford, when he pursued a like course in the Dunkin campaign that locality, but that gentleman justified his course by considerations of the public welfare, of which he held himself to be the custodian equally with every other good citizen. It is a Judge's offiupon its commission the penalties the law prescribes. It can be none the less his private right to lighten the performence of this painful public duty by endeavouring in his capacity as a citizen to reduce to a minimum the incentives and mark does not apply so aptly to a Chancery Judge as to some others. When the Western Powers took up the cudgels for him in the Crimean struggle he was content to give at once the post of honour and danger to the "first-rate Powers," and to take for himself a subordinate place in the operations of the war. The Peninsular part of that contest was fought out even at Kars and elsewhere he consented to be generalled and generally pulled through by his allies. Left to himself, however, in the present quarrel, he seems to understand the situation, and conduct himself accordingly.
