

Daily British Whig

TUESDAY EVENING, AUG. 21, 1877.

WIND WASH. - Singular coincidence. Given day and so rain.

CITY AND VICINITY - No Paper. - The Whig will not be printed to-morrow.

YACHTING. - The yachts "Eid" and "Whisper," of Belleville, passed down the river.

THE WATERLOO PAPERS. - The Waterloo papers deem the correspondence of "A.W.M." worthy of re-echoing from the columns of the Whig.

THE 4TH. - Do the Orangemen contemplate a celebration of the 4th of September? Several parties are anxious to know.

ARRIVED. - Mr. Summerby, head master of the Model School, has arrived from Ottawa. He enters upon his duties on the 27th.

SKETCHES. - Mr. E. V. Murphy, one of the official reporters of the United States Senate, who lately visited Kingston, is writing some interesting letters about the city and her institutions.

LACROSSE. - The West End Lacrosse Club, of Prescott, talk of having an excursion to this city on the 1st of September, and the Secretary writes, asking if a match can be arranged with the K.L.C. on that date. Can it be done?

INSPECTION. - Mr. Baxter, Inspector of Weights and Measures for this city and county, has paid quite a lengthy visit to a part of the city, his object being to see that the new law is generally observed in the district over which he has supervision.

PRIVATE PARTIES. - Almost every evening the small steamers in the harbours are engaged in conveying small parties to convenient points, where in the pale moonlight they pass a few hours in the most social and delightful manner.

A LONG TRIP. - Says the Oswego Advertiser: Mr. John Forsyth accompanied by two other young men, started for the Thousand Islands this afternoon in the row boat Emma Maud. They will stop at Kingston. The trip will cover two weeks' time.

NOTICED. - The Adams and Pulaski people noticed the effect of Canadian soda water upon their freemen, who recently visited Kingston. A correspondent records that a large number of the boys could walk straight when they left town than when they returned.

HONOURS. - We are glad to see that on every suitable opportunity, due precedence is given by our local contemporary to its party leaders. In this spirit of party respect and loyalty, it very properly placed a "cut" of the Great Stretcher at the head of the illustrations of to-day's circus advert.

EXCURSION. - Kingston was to-day visited by an excursion party from Lodi, N.Y. They came by railway to Clayton, and thence to this city by the steamer Paxton. We never remember this place to have been the objective point of so many pleasure parties before.

REHE. - Mr. D. I. K. Rine writes us, asking to be informed if the time he has specified to resume the temperance work in Kingston was satisfactory? The time he specified in a previous letter included the 22nd, 23rd, 24th and 25th, which he hopes will meet the approval of all. We take this means of making the intimation known to the public.

WELLS ISLAND. - The Primitive Methodists had their excursion down the river this morning. The boat was not crowded, but she had a nice load, one that will not feel the discomfort of too little space and too much company. We shall have something to say of the excursion and the opening of the Parliament on Thursday.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT. - Last evening a cart's horse ran away on Wellington street. In the course of the frightened animal's race the cart overturned, the result of which was the infliction of a severe and very serious wound in the horse's side. No one could look on the injury without feeling the greatest pity for the suffering brute.

A SHELLED. - When old women go out on a tour of spot collecting in the evenings they should make it a point to keep their wills as tight as a barrel of rye, trundled along Wellington street, last evening, caused a separation of friends much quicker than desirable or usual under ordinary circumstances.

SYDENHAM HIGH SCHOOL. - Inspector Agnew has been informed that the following have successfully passed their entrance examinations, Sydenham High School: Booth, Nellie; Botting, Sarah; Hamilton, Emma Jane; Hentig, Lizzie; Monson, Helen Rena; Chown, James Edwin; Corkeil, Edward James; Suddard, Joseph W.; Ward, Barton Brewer.

THE SCHOOLS. - The country schools have resumed, their vacation not extending over so long a period as that of the city schools. A number of the teachers would resume the more readily were they not anxious about the result of the recent examinations for second class certificates. The discovered frauds - not in this country - have placed matters in a state of gloomy uncertainty.

RAINS IN THE COUNTRY. - A gentleman who has travelled much in the back country informs us that it has rained in some of the more sequestered localities almost daily, more or less, for two weeks. So much rain has fallen that the country people fear they are going to lose much of their abundant crops; at least they will be sufferers from the inclemency of the weather so far.

CIVIC HOLIDAY.

The Programme for To-morrow, Our civic holiday falls on to-morrow, and it is but reasonable to expect that it will be generally observed. A holiday, a twenty-four hours' cessation from labor, in this hot weather, is a relief which every citizen most appreciate and hail with a great deal of pleasure.

By way of picturing the gatherings of the Irish societies and the Orangemen will be patronized liberally, very liberally. Chatham Grove, Simcoe Island, is recognized as the resort of the most popular gatherings, and the more it is frequented the more does it grow in the estimation of the public.

The Orangemen have made the full arrangements for their picnic, and the location is so convenient, while so many are interested in it, that it will be attended, we have not the least doubt, by the most satisfactory results.

The S. S. PARLIAMENT. A large number of persons left the city and vicinity last evening and to-day, by other routes and conveyances than the excursion steamer, for Wellesley Island, to attend the opening services of the Sunday School Parliament.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

THE TRIP TO ALEXANDRIA BAY AND CAMP GROUND. Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Church promises to be an unusually attractive and agreeable one. The route chosen is down the Canadian Channel to the farthest destination of the party, returning via Wells Island up the American Channel.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Addresses in First Congregational Church. Last evening a meeting in the interests of the Sabbath School and city work was held in the First Congregational Church. The attendance was good. Dr. Castle, of Jarvis Street Baptist Church, occupied the chair, and there were seated around him on the platform Rev. Mr. Rowland, of Whitestown, N.Y.; Rev. Mr. Ray, of Bath, N.Y.; Rev. Mr. Griffith, Rev. F. McCuaig, and Mr. F. H. Chamberlain, Secretary of the Syracuse Young Men's Christian Association. The service was opened by the singing of "The Old, Old Story," after which Rev. Mr. McCuaig offered up prayer.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHAIRMAN delivered the first address. He said he delivered himself in an anomalous position. He had supposed that Rev. Mr. Crafts, the originator of the Sunday School Parliament, would have been present to conduct the meeting. But he was one of those ubiquitous persons, who, nevertheless, finds it impossible to be at a great many points at the same instant, and in his great desire to work up an individual interest in the Parliament he was at a distance, speaking on behalf of a cause which he loved so well.

THE CHURCHMAN.

The Churchman, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.

THE CHURCHMAN, in announcing the next by-law, prefaced it by stating that one year ago a company of gentlemen had left Wells Island in a small boat to convey certain speakers to the Sunday School Parliament, and among them were Mr. P. P. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss. It was the last time he had seen them. They were all aware of their tragic end; they were no more on earth, but he believed they were singing "Our love for Jesus." Mr. Bliss had sung it so often that finally he said, "I am tired singing of my love for Jesus; reforming is a dead letter for me." With him he wrote this hymn, "I am so glad that my Father in Heaven," etc., and made the music for it, and both were sung the world over.