WATCHES!

JEWELLERY!

ROMAINE GOLD, so extensively worn in Paris, was first discovered in 1870, by the celebrated French chemist, Mons. D. Be Lange, who manufactured it into jewellery, and for five years sold it to the leading jewellers of Paris for solid gold. In 1875, when his secret became known, ten of the manufacturing jewellers established a stock company, with a capital of $10,000,000 for the purpose of manufacturing ROMAINE GOLD JEWELLERY AND WATCHES. With this immense capital, and the aid of improved machinery, they are enabled to produce all the latest patterns of jewellery at less than one tenth the cost of solid gold, and of a quality and color which makes it impossible even for experts to detect it from the genuine.

We have secured the exclusive agency of the United States and Canada, for the sale of of all goods manufactured from this metal, and in order to introduce them in the most speedy manner, have put up assorted sample lots as given below, which we will send at one tenth the retail value until January 1st, 1878. THE OLD SCHOOL HOUSE.

The little school house where I went,
In learning's maze to wander,
The spot where happy days I spent,
I see before me yonder.
The bush that o'er the window leaned,
Bore roses red in Bunches—
I recollect the chuck haired fiend
That used to steal my lunches.

That little school house 'mong the vines,
And 'neath the lofty cedar,
Is where I first did scan the lines
Of Watson's Second Reader.
Those were the happy days when I
Walked home with fair-haired Nelly—
I recollect a black, black eye,
I got from Peter Kelly.

It almost melts my heart to tears
While through this vale I wander,
Upon those sweet, departed years,
To pause and fondly ponder.
There was no pang to chill my breast,
Life, then, was never shady—
But now I have to work, sans rest,
To pay my old landlady.

Mr. Gladstone on the County Franchise.

The Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone addressed from the terrace of his garden at Hawarden Castle, Aug. 21, a party of over 2,000 Lancashire Liberals, who had come out from various parts on an excursion. He said: —I am very sorry that we are obliged, somehow or other, to mix a little politics with our excursions of pleasure; but it seems to belong to the habit of the country—(hear) upon a public matter—such as the one in particular that we mentioned—I won't pass it by without notice. It was a reference that was made to the state of the county franchise—(hear)—and to the fact that a large number of persons are now deprived of the franchise because they happen to live beyond the boundaries of a borough, who, if they were within those boundaries, or if the borough boundaries should be extended, would get the franchise immediately. (Hear, hear.) Well, I cannot tell you, gentlemen, how dear, as I think, are the rights and wrongs of the matter. (Cheers.) In former times the distinction of county franchise and borough franchise was a very reasonable distinction, and I won't now enter into the question; but this I will say, that, looking at the manner which in counties are now intermingled in this country, and in which vast populations that substantially have the character of borough populations are spread over almost the entire face of counties like South Lancashire and the West Riding of Yorkshire, it is the height of absurdity, as well as the height of injustice, to pretend to stand upon the present seclusion. (Loud cheers.) I think you know the time is very near at hand when you will get that matter conceded. (Renewed cheers.) The Government go on opposing it and voting against it, but the opposition they offer to it is a sham opposition. I do not mean to say they are desirous to give it to you, but I think they are pretty well aware that they cannot help giving it you—(cheers)—and when they see that the thing must be done, I think, judging from former experiences—(laughter)—that they will prefer your having it from them to your getting it from us. (Laughter and cheers.) But now don't you go to sleep about it, for if you do I think that the Government will remain asleep also.

A Modern Evangeline.

The story of Evangeline is repeated with wonderful fidelity in all its details in the experience of a young French girl, a resident of Marseilles. She was engaged to a sailor to whom she was to be married on his return from a voyage to New York. He did not return, and after a year she got a berth as stewardess's assistant on one of the Harre steamers, to come here in search of him. On the passage a rich American lady became interested in her story and resolved to help her to find out her lover. In New York she learned that he gone to Canada. For months she travelled about the Dominion, sometimes close on his track and again losing every clue as to his whereabouts.

She returned to New York, and one day while standing at a Broadway crossing waiting her turn to get across she saw the object of her long search on the other side. She shrieked his name and ran into the middle of the street, but a policeman caught her and saved her from the wheels of the string of vehicles. "Angel of God there was none," and she never again saw the Gabriel she had so long sought and so nearly found. She learned that he had sailed for San Francisco, and so went overland to California to meet him. Arrived on the Pacific coast, she learned that her lover had fallen overboard just outside the Heads and been drowned.

Meanwhile the body of a young man, dressed in sailor's clothes, was cast ashore on the beach, carried to the coroner's office, and, not being identified, was interred in the public cemetery. A waterlogged pocketbook was taken from the dead man which contained only a few letters written in French and unaddressed. The girl hearing of this went to the coroner's office and found that the letters were her's. The waves had tardily and partially recompensed her devoted search, and she was able to find the grave of her lover.
