

TORY DEMONSTRATION! THE MEETING IN NAPANE 4500 PERSONS PRESENT! THE SPEECHES AND ORATIONS.

Countess of Lennox and Addington, Hastings, Prince Edward. After viewing the moving panorama, so to speak, the streets were emptied of their scores of unsteady pedestrians. They made a rush for the place where the meeting was to be held. We are always in favour of an open space where the audience can cluster about the rostrum, but in this case we did not think the choice of a site too best that could be made, being exposed to much too cold. However, the assembly being so numerous, the Chief was cordially. They also greeted his colleagues and the coming statesmen. Among the former were Messrs. J. M. Campbell, Hon. T. M. Gibbs, Hon. W. McDougall, Mr. Tom White, and among the latter two Kingston politicians, Mr. A. W. Walker and Dr. McLaughlin. Sir John and Dr. Tupper arrived from the West on Monday evening, and became the guests of Mr. Orange, M.P.P. Mr. White arrived also on Monday evening, and Messrs. Gibbs and McDougall landed on the down train expressing their sympathy for the down town people. Mr. Gibbs was the most popular speaker to be present. He stood erect and stately on the platform and appeared to be restless and impatient to discharge a little duty which he owed to the Hon. Finance Minister. He was telling of a patient blessing for certain visits which Mr. Cartwright made to South Ontario when the Hon. T.N. was running for Parliament. But we digress. There were other guests.

Mr. F. S. Richardson, an artist, read the address on behalf of the workmen. The document was short but to the point. It declared Sir John to be the first statesman in Canada, and as such they held him in high regard and esteem. But they addressed him independent of political and party associations. They looked upon him as the saviour of this country, and hoped for his return to power. Then the land would be prosperous; they hinted, it would not be long before the least intimation of how such a situation was going to be effected. Long life to Sir John was their closing wish. (Applause.)

Mr. J. M. Campbell, M.P.P., read the address on behalf of the workmen. He had been a workingman himself, and he could appreciate their struggles. He acknowledged the friendly terms of the address.

Mr. White, of Montreal, was next introduced. He thought that after the exhaustive view of political field by Dr. Tupper he did not expect much from him. He had the conviction that after his long and successful career in public life he would not be able to do more than to give the people a glimpse of his political career. He had watched his political career in its various phases, and he did not think that he had done much to deserve the praise which he was receiving. He had rendered to the country and had to-day to reject the attacks which had been made upon him, and to declare that he was not going to leave their confidence in him and to affect personal friendship existing between them. Everywhere in the Dominion this same feeling was to be found. Why should such a state of things exist? He asked the audience to consider that he had not carried out his professions, that his members were what Sir Francis Hincks had called them, an organized hypocrisy. He asked them for favour to the Government, and he asked them to discard members of the Conservative party. He referred to the removal of Mr. Cartwright from the office of Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, because he had not been able to do his duty as a man of high personal honour, and he didn't think Mr. Cartwright was fit to be a Governor. He also lapped the Government for not being as economical as he thought they should be. He thought, however, that they were very extravagant, and they had promised, he alleged, to pursue a policy of retrenchment. Supposing they did not increase the expenditure and stood still in amount of expenses, they still would be very extravagant. He had a record of expenditure which he charged that the Government was corruptly carried on. He told them something new and quite fresh. Mr. Mackenzie was packing the Department of Public Works with men of high personal honour, and he didn't think Mr. Cartwright was fit to be a Governor. Mr. Cartwright, as to his rights of criticism, he would measure his patriotism with that gentleman. He (the speaker) said that he would have to leave the country. Mr. Cartwright had forsaken his country and his country at the first. Sir A. T. Galt and the Monetary Times, his friends of Sir John, felt obliged to condemn the fact. He had the voters of Ottawa and eight other constituencies, by the supplanting of Reform by Conservative members. The doctor went into a defence of his political record and financial ability, which he modestly would not, we know, quite rely on repeating. If he had lost power in his Province because of his Confederation work, he cheerfully embraced the humiliation. He looked for a great and noble career, and he had been greatly disappointed. He had been greatly disappointed on the ground that day to convince him that a change of confidence was necessary. He looked for a great and noble career, and he had been greatly disappointed.
