JORDON -- CAMERON.

Annals of a Well Spent Life. (Watertown Times.) About a year and a half ago, J. R. D. Cameron landed in Watertown, He found employment in the bobbin, winderbusiness and in making leve to many females in the city, who admired his winning ways and handsome figure. Cameron is a host. He could count several girls at a time, and besides keeping each in good humor, would keep the feelings of his wife or wives pacified to such an extent that trouble was never anticipated. For so short a sojourn in the city he had many female acquaintances. Cameron would sit in the back kitchen of many a residence with the servant girl long after the other people in the house had retired; he could borrow money of them, and otherwise get into their good graces as easily as the paky fly slides into the sugar-bowl. On one occasion he was about to marry a very respectable servant girl, and would have succeeded had the girl not heard, just before the event was to take place, that he was a married man. A dressmaker who resided here last winter became too familiar with Cameron, and just before the wedding was to take place retired to private life in Canada. The meanest thing we have heard of his doing was this: He borrowed $3 of a girl to go on an excursion, promising to take her. When the time came for the excursion he skipped off with another girl.

Massey street, he spied a woman on the other side of the thoroughfare. He left WATE BUY FOR CASH in the best markets "his girl" and suddenly crossed over to on the other side, he commenced choking and misusing her. He soon left her, e Kettle and Rendered, Cheap. Also one however, and went on with his girl. I was too much for the poor woman to bear and she lost no time in going to the police office and procuring a warrant for VV ALL and not different prices for differ Cameron, her husband, for assault and The case was set down for trial on Monday last, on which occasion Cameron desired a postponement for a few days. The case was accordingly adjourned to Wednesday. On Wednesday it was again adjourned; this time to Thursday. In the meantime Cameron slid out to Grocer, Wine and Spirit Merchant Ogdensburg and procured a witness, whom he swore was his sister. She in turn swore that Cameron was her brother, and everything seemed decidedly lovely.

The trial began at an early hour on Thursday before the Recorder. A jury of six very intelligent persous was empanneled to sit, hear the testimony and say whether Cameron was or was not guilty of the assault. General Winslow was counsel for Cameron, Henry Purcell for Mrs. Cameron. The entire forenoon was occupied by the examination of Mrs. Cameron and Cameron's sister. Mrs. Camerou swore that she was married to this man in 1872 at a certain place in Canada, and that he went by the name of Evans at that time. The sister swore that she married Evans at the same place and at the same time, but this man was not he. Mrs. Cameron swore positively that Cameron was Evans and that she was married to hin. The other lady swore she was Mrs. Evans, and to The Strange Adventures of a Phaetori, by W. make matters plain, produced pictures of Evans which Charles Hart swore were pictures of Cameron. This lightning sister then produced her marriage certificate signed by a Canadian clergyman at the same time and place she had named. Mrs Cameron at once swore that the certificate was hers and that it had been

It is generally believed that the man Cameron The trial lasted till ten o'clock. General Winslow occupied about an hour in summing up, while Mr. Purcell thad a little less to say. The jury went out and remained only a short time, when they returned with a verdict of guilty, whereupon the Recorder fined Cameron $50 or six months.
