A Mother's Treasure. The Chicago Times gives the touching incident of a mother's affection: A Mrs. Roberts lost a few months ago her little boy. Frequently since the death and burial of her boy she has gone to his grave to scatter over it fresh flowers. Now and then she weaves a cluster in some curious shape and leaves it there at twilight for the dews to moisten while she is away. It is one of the misfortune of this lady that she is a somnambulist, and on several occasion she has been detained as she was leaving her home late in the night. On Wednesday night last she eluded the attention of any one about her own premises, and had gone as far as 957 North Clark street in her night dress bofore she was noticed. At this number resides Mrs. Mosher, who chanced to be at the window when she saw the figure glide by almost swiftly, the long hair falling upon the shoulders and form of the strange looking sight. In most women and in some men, such a scene would have caused the blood to stand still But Mrs. Mosher, guessing what it was, summoned her husband, who pursued the moving figure and escorted her into his house, where she remained during the night. On the following morning Mrs. Mosher had her sent to her home in a carriage. When Mrs. Robert was found she had and in the other hand a collection of flowers. She said she had gone to sleep at home and dreamed that her little boy had come back to her and took her by the band, and asked her to go with him to his grave. She arose and took the clothes and the flowers, as stated, and was found in her sleep, hastening to the spot in the silent city of the dead, where her own treasure was buried.

rich. The property which he left, lesides his library, and objects of art, which are bequeathed to the state, is estimated at about $2,700,000. It comprises the hotel on the Place of St. Georges, in Paris, three neighboring houses, lots in the avenue de l'Imperatrice, mining and railroad stocks, and French, Russian and American government bonds. Mme. Thiers is his sole executor. Among his minor legacies is one $450 a year to Louis, his valet, and $2,400 a year to be divided among several other servants.
