All accounts from the plains concur in foreshadowing trouble with the Indians which may possibly give rise to international complications. Sitting Bull and his thousand braves have not only not left Canada but manifest no disposition to do so. The commission which is to treat with them from the United States is a s anticipated failure, and our unwelcome guests are making preparations to spend the winter on neutral British soil. It will be the duty of the Canadian Mounted Police to watch the movements of these wninvited visitors and headquarters whatever preparations the Red men may make for raids across the line. No precaution will be omitted on the part of the Canadian authorities to prevent any such overt proceedings originating it. British territory.
