THE DREAM'S OF YOUTH. We had our dreams when we were young Of what we thought the world must be. Of justice ever conquering wrong.
And love assuaging misery.
We built up this bright world of ours Of golden hues and lordly forms.
As children fashion hi is and towers.
In gorgeous clouds that cover storms

We were deceived, but sister, dear. Were we the worse for such a truth ! Because we found no haman sphere
Could span the golden world of youth ?
Had we been happier, had our trust
Been grudged to human powers and aims.
And man divine been viewed as dust,
That beats not with immertal flames?

No, no, be sure the best belief ... Is always wise when least repaid: t is not an uncheering grief
That eighs for all that Heaven has med: Oream on—if dreams preserve the bone Of man to man, nor think it vain,

The worse to whom your hearts respond, Your heart may win-to love agaiu.

Hunting a Wild Horse,

(From the Omaha Herald.) For several months a band of wild horses have been roaming over the plains in the vicinity of Pine Bluffs, forty miles east of here, drinking daily of the waters of Lodge Pole Creek, a fine large stream near that place. The leader of the band is a large, elegantly proportioned, jet black stallion, with sweeping raven mane and tail, fiery eye, and majestic mien. Five days ago a party of cattle herders decided to give chase to this wild monarch of the boundless plain, and mounting fresh and fleet steeds, set out upon his trail. They had arranged for frequent changes of animals, with the view of keeping him in that immediate vicinity, and wearing him out by giving him no rest. The band of flyers was found, and then began the long and arduous struggle between men used to the ways of wild horses and cattle, skilled in every device of 'cutting out,' 'rounding up,' &c., and an untamed rover of the plains, full of subtle equine strategy, of wonderful speed and incalculable nerve, 'bottom and powers of endurance. For five days and nights has the chase continued. Several of the herders' horses have been killed by riding, but when our informant left Pine Bluffs yesterday morning the noble stallion was prancing around at the head of a band of tame horses, seemingly as fresh and vigorous as though he had never known fatigue. On the cecond day he was separated from his wild companions, and has since been kept away from them. Mr. Cole, the leader of the pursuers, is confident that he will yet cap-

Mark Twain in the Atlantic Monthly) Among other talk to-day, it came out that whale ships carry no doctor. The captain adds the doctorship to his own duties. He not only gives medicines, but sets broken limbs after notions of his own, or saws them off and sears the stump when amputation seems best. The captain is provided with a medicine chest, with the medicines numbered instead of named. A book of directions goes with this. It describes diseases and symptoms, and says: "Give a teaspoonful of No. 9 once an hour," or "Give ten grains of No. 12 every half hour," etc. One of our sea captains came across a skipper in the North Pacific who was in a state of great surprise and perplexity. Said he: "There's something rotten about this medicine chest business. One of my men was sick-nothing much the matter. J looked in the book; it said, give him a teaspoonful of No. 15. I went to the medicine chest, and I see I was out of No. 15. I judged I'd got to get up a combination somehow that would fill the bill, so I have into the fellow half a teaspoonful of No. 8 and half a teaspoonful of No 7, and I'll be hanged if it didn't kill him in fifteen minutes! There's something about this medicine chest sys-

-----A Good Borss.-There is much pleasure and profit in the service of a good horse, and but very little of either in a bad one; no person from choice will retain a bad horse; many, however, are in possession of such who need not be. We think there are few horses so bad but that their condition can be improved and rendered more valuable and useful for their owners, to effect which, there is nothing equal to Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy, it has affected astonishing results in thousands of cases.
