Concert Scene. At or about the middle of the programme of a Concert at Brockville on Friday evening, a lamentable accident occurred, which, in a great measure, marred the success of the Concert, and caused many to reluquish their seats and leave the Hall. It appears that through carelessaess a kerosone lamp had been placed on the piano, and upon Prof. Kaufman putting up the cover in order to play an accompaniment, the lamp was knocked down and broken. In its descent from the piano to the floor, it come in contact with another, which was also broken, and the oil immediately ignited and burned furiously on the floor, over the space of a few feet. At this juncture, some individual, with more ardor than brains, threw a quantity of water on the flames, which, instead of quenching

the fire, only caused it to extend further over the floor, and then a panie, fearful in its nature, took possession of the audience. Men, semen and children, Recout Polar Voyages, a Record of Adventures some shouting, some crying, and others uttering fearful execrations, filled the aisles in a second, and made a mad and desperate rush for the doors. Several ladies, completely overcome with fright, dropped senseless to the floor, while their companions, dead to the sensibilities of humanity, rushed over their prestrate forms. For the space of r few seconds the cries, of Brilliant Orations, by the most eminent hoarse men, and the acreams of herrified females, rent the air, while the attempts of the maddened throng to gain an exit from the building constituted a drama once seen never to be forgotten. During this time every effort was made to extinguish the fismes, until finally some gentleman, with creditable presence of minde seized the piano cloth and in a moment smothered the fire completely. -Reporter.

The Cow's Good Name.

A landlord in one of our Western villages a few months ago engaged as his 'man of all work' an Irishman just fresh from the old sod. Patrick was a good, steady sort of a fellow, and went about his business every day with the regularity of cleckwork. The cows were milked, the stable was attended to, and everything was looked after in good style. Twice every day he came in with a pail brimming over from each of the cows, and the landlord was in the habit of boasting to his neighbors how well the cows kept up, notwithstanding the falling away in the pasture. But a few days ago the man set to other work, and it fell to the lot of one of the female attendents to do the milking. Milk as well as she would, however, she couldn't manage to squeeze more than half a pail from each oow, which fact was reported to the landlord. 'How is this, Patl' he asked. 'The girl says she can't get more than half a pail from each cow, and you always brought in a pail full. 'Faix now,' said Pat. 'nuther could I; but shure I belaved I must get you a pail full ivery time as at the firsht, and so I filled it up wid water!" Patrick couldn't understand the ways of milch cows, but he was bound to keep up their good name. Thousands of people are now sarelessly allowing themselves to drift through the preiminary symptoms of consumption, under the fatal delusion that they are troubled with noth ing but a slight cold Row necessary is it then, that a cold abould be cared for from its incipi ency and every exertion need to get rul of it Bryan's P . monic Wafers will stop the hack ing cough in a few minutes, and by their in figence on the bronehial and pulmonary organs
