MR. CUNNINCHAM. The resignation of Mr. Cunningham, M. P., for New Westminster, has drawn considerable attention to far-Western politics, and also caused the public mind to revert to the events of the last session of the Dominion Parliament, of which Mr. Cunningham, up to the date of his resignation, was a member. Business transactions with agents of the Government, conducted in perfectly good faith, and without the remotest idea that they involved the question of his parliamentary status, seem to have none the less vitisted his claim to his seat in the Commons. Like sever al others on both sides of the House, who had unwittingly been caught in the same trap, Mr. Cunningham has found it to be necessary to resign his seat and submit himsalf to the ordeal of re-election Tie act of indemnity passed last session freed the gentlemen who had, it is to be presumed unconsciously, trespassed across the line of parliamentary independence, from the penal or pecuniary consequences of the indiscretion. The $2,000 per diem penalty for sitting as 'contractors' in parliament has been remitted, though the seat has been vacated all the same in wince and his own constituency. SURRENDERS.

Two of them have occurred in Europe during the week now closing. That of the Turkish commander at Plevna was an honourable, yes, almost glorious submission to the inevitable, after all the resources of valour had been exhausted to resist the powerful enemy which environed him. So stout a fight did Osman Pasha make for the stronghold he had undertaken to defend against enormous edds without, and with the assistance of but scant supplies within, that the heroism of his defouce, especially the gallant dash of his last sortie, extorted the admi-

Altogether the President has emerged from his contest with the people, baffled and beaten at every turn not only, but with dreoping laurels and a sullied reputation for that prudence, which in his case would certainly have been the better part of valour. With him infatuation has alternated with irresolution, and the very moderate fame he had earned as a soldier in the field has been completely clouded over by his proven incapacity as a statesman. He had the chance to become in reality what his official title implies, the head of a free people, and he has chosen to throw his golden opportunity to the winds.
