During the short time Mr. Brown has been in the Cabinet he has taught the Couservatives to like him. He has not footed his political friends upon the province; he edly carried on by professional hands, as has not exhibited any insolence of office; circumstances would show. He hoped that | nated. his public duties have been performed with the thieves would be discovered, and punishzeal and activity; and his whole contour ed. The majority of the prisoners were gap, and ably supported in parliament, what in the Cabinet he had consented to. And the Globe followed suit, and when some of the Conservative Journals turned tail and slunk away, manfully came out and supported with all its power and influence, the measures ailuded to. For these and other things we have learned to like Mr. Brown, and consequently we regret his loss.
