

MEDICAL A NIGHT WATCHMAN'S STORY.

What gave me a start in business? said Jerry Jarman. "Well, I'd tell you."

"In 1882, I was a night watchman, and one day I was on duty in the street when I saw a man in a dark coat and a hat, who was walking very fast and looking over his shoulder as if he was afraid of being followed."

"I had just settled down for a quiet hour of sleep when I saw a man in a dark coat and a hat, who was walking very fast and looking over his shoulder as if he was afraid of being followed."

"I had just settled down for a quiet hour of sleep when I saw a man in a dark coat and a hat, who was walking very fast and looking over his shoulder as if he was afraid of being followed."

"I had just settled down for a quiet hour of sleep when I saw a man in a dark coat and a hat, who was walking very fast and looking over his shoulder as if he was afraid of being followed."

"I had just settled down for a quiet hour of sleep when I saw a man in a dark coat and a hat, who was walking very fast and looking over his shoulder as if he was afraid of being followed."

THE BOUND GIRL.

What's in a name? says the great book of names, and it is true, for in a name is often a deep significance in a name. And when I heard of a name called "The Bound Girl," I could not help but think of the old story of the girl who was bound to a tree and who was later found by a man who was looking for a wife.

"I had just settled down for a quiet hour of sleep when I saw a man in a dark coat and a hat, who was walking very fast and looking over his shoulder as if he was afraid of being followed."

"I had just settled down for a quiet hour of sleep when I saw a man in a dark coat and a hat, who was walking very fast and looking over his shoulder as if he was afraid of being followed."

THE FLOWER OF THE WEEK.

For the past few weeks great clumps of shrubbery on suburban lawns have been preparing a surprise for flower lovers. They have been waiting for the first frost to sweep over the tops of the branches. All through the damp, chilly days they have been steadily develop-

"I had just settled down for a quiet hour of sleep when I saw a man in a dark coat and a hat, who was walking very fast and looking over his shoulder as if he was afraid of being followed."
