To Secure Complete Identification.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 4.—The body of Benjamin Pietzel, whom H. H. Holmes is accused of having murdered, and which was exhumed last Saturday for the purpose of removing the skull from the trunk, was dug up again, yesterday, by order of district attorney Graham. A portion of one of the legs of the corpse was amputated and parts of the clothing of the dead man were secured for the purpose of making more complete the identification of the remains as that of Pietzel. District attorney Graham had the leg amputated to add to the evidence that the body is unmistakeably that of Pietzel. For this purpose the skull was removed last Saturday, as the peculiarly marked teeth of Pietzel will offer almost certain identification.

The Population of Two Cities.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 4.—The warfare going on between St. Paul and Minneapolis, as to how many people each has got, ended last evening with the announcement of St. Paul's population as 140,292. At the same time it was announced that eight wards of Minneapolis had been counted, and that the city's total would slightly exceed 188,000. In five years Minneapolis has added 26,000 to her population, and St. Paul 7,000. There have been charges of falsification on both sides, but it is believed that the census for both cities is nearer the truth than any that has been taken in fifteen years.

CUT DOWN THE SALARY.

Dominion Church Hits the Stationing Committee by Stabbing Dr. Saunders.

OTTAWA, Sept. 4.—The official board of Dominion Methodist church has fixed the stipend of the pastor for this year at $1,500 and parsonage. This action by the board reflecting, as it does, the salary paid Rev. Dr. Benson, of $2,100, to Rev. Dr. Saunders, the present pastor, by 600, is the result of the trouble which has agitated the congregation since the beginning of the conference year.

In fixing the stipend of Rev. Dr. Saunders there was a great deal of feeling, for many of the gentlemen said that the reduction was merely intended as a protest against the action of conference.

Gentlemen on the other side objected to inflicting upon Dr. Saunders punishment for the sins of others, especially when it was known that all through this unpleasant business the reverend gentleman had been most self-sacrificing.

Then the opposition hastened to say that they regretted very much having to do so, and wanted it clearly understood that no reflection towards Dr. Saunders was in any way implied.

The matter does not rest just here even now, for there are many who feel that it is a shame for the impression to go abroad that the church is acting in such a very worldly manner, and even if the stipend is not later on raised to its former figure, then the difference will be made good in another way.

The St. Andrew's society of this city had its annual excursion to-day, from here to New York, by the Canada Atlantic railway, and down the Hudson river from Albany to New York. TO APPEAR IN SPOTLESS WHITE.

The Valkyrie is Being Repainted—A Host of Men at Work.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—By lamplight, moonlight and rays of the electric lights in Erie basin, thirty-five men worked nearly all of last night, scraping, planing and polishing the top sides of Valkyrie III., and before noon to-day all the black paint will have disappeared from the water line up, and she will appear in a coat of spotless white.

Black on a yacht's sides, above the water line at least, is not to Lord Dunraven's liking. He believes, as many others do, that the lines of a boat are better brought out by white paint, so he gave orders, yesterday, that the first thing to be done when the yacht was put in dry-dock would be to scrape off the black paint and make his boat appear as she did in her races in British waters—in a coat of pure white. An additional reason given for the change is that black paint absorbs the sun's rays more than white.

The yacht arrived at the basin about 4:30 p.m., and it was nine before the last water was pumped out of the dock, leaving the Valkyrie dry for the men to work at the hull. Stages were put up and a gang of painters were soon at work on the starboard side scraping it, while the dock men and carpenters tacked on a narrow batten to mark the water line on the port side.

It was slow work getting that black paint off. By 10:30 o'clock seventeen men had scraped nearly half the paint off on the starboard side, from the rail to the water line. They were to work all night taking advantage of the cool night. It is not likely that the yacht's hull below the water line will be painted, while those at work says it is first to be made as smooth as glass and then pot-leaded to the water line.

Lord Dunraven, Maitland Kersey, designer Watson and Arthur Glennie dined in the main saloon of the tender, City of Bridgeport, last night.

After dinner they came out on deck to see the eclipse and the painters working by moonlight.

The yacht's crew knocked off when she had hauled into dry dock and were not required to do any night work. They are being well fed and get their regular sleep, so they will be in good trim when wanted.

INSURANCE SWINDLER CAUGHT.

Dr. Fraker Found Living in the Wilds of Northern Minnesota.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 4.—Living in the wilds of northern Minnesota, fifty miles from a post office, with only a boy for a companion, Dr. George W. Fraker, who planned one of the most gigantic and successful insurance swindles of modern times, was captured by officers who have been on his track for the past two years. Up to Aug. 12th last there was a standing reward of $20,000 for his arrest offered by the insurance companies. In the latter part of 1893 Dr. Fraker was physician to the St. Elmo hotel, at Excelsior Springs, a famous health resort near Kansas City. Together with seven or eight companions, the doctor went fishing on the Missouri river one day, and after dark, while in the company of George Harry, James Triplet and Jake Crowley, a negro, he disappeared and was seen no more. These three men afterwards swore positively that they saw him drown, but his body could not be found.

Some three or four months previous to this he took out life insurance to the amount of $58,000. The insurance companies decided to contest the claims, but the court finally decided against them, and the money was paid to Fraker's executors. The search for him was continued, however, and resulted in his arrest at his home near Tower, Minn., where he was living under the name of Schnell. He admitted his identity at once. Dr. Fraker was lodged in jail at Duluth pending his removal to Topeka.

Sir Robert Peel's Debts.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The creditors of Sir Robert Peel have accepted a compromise proposed by his attorneys of ten shillings in the pound on all unsecured debts. Bankruptcy proceedings were begun against Sir Robert Peel in 1893. The total of his preferred liabilities amounts to nearly £20,000. The arrangement made to-day with his creditors provides for a deposit of £10,000 for the purpose of carrying out the agreement and the payment of the costs. Mr. Gladstone visited Sir Robert last week at Drayton manor. The young man seems to have settled down in life. This arrangement with his creditors and the avoidance of bankruptcy proceedings practically places him on his feet again. His extravagance, which dated from his school days at Eton, has made a fortune for London usurers.

Was Accidentally Shot.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 4.—A dispatch from sheriff John H. Cole, of Philipsburg, Montana, announces that John Whitney, born and raised in Jefferson county, accidentally shot and killed himself, near that place. Mr. Whitney had extensive mining interests there.

THEY DESECRATED TOMBS.

A GANG OF YOUNG VANDALS BREAK INTO VAULTS.

Two Albany Cemeteries Were Attacked—The Articles in the Coffins Were Scattered About—The Walls of Various Vaults Broken Into.

ALBANY, Sept. 4.—Some time last night in old St. John's Catholic cemetery, in this city, a vault, said to contain the remains of a young girl named Shea, who died about fifteen years ago, was broken into by a gang of young vandals. The walls of the vault consisted of a double thickness of bricks and the top was covered with a stone slab. The slab was too heavy for the boys to remove, so they dug under the slabs until they reached the bricks. These they quickly demolished and an opening large enough for a boy to enter was made. The coffin was a metallic one, with a glass face. The glass was broken and the bones taken out by the boys and scattered about the tomb. A prayer book, rosary and trinkets, which were enclosed in the coffin, were also scattered about. A new coffin was provided this afternoon and the remains enclosed and removed to Calvary cemetery. In the cemetery there is a large receiving vault, erected in 1851. The west wall of this vault was torn down by the young vandals and work commenced on a smaller vault in another part of the cemetery. The caretaker lives at the entrance of the cemetery, which has been closed for four years. The boys are at large, but the police will try and capture them.

THEY ATE CANNED SALMON.

The Ill Effects Caused Girls to Rave and Tear Their Hair.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 4.—A peculiar poisoning case is causing a sensation in London West. On Saturday morning Miss Minnie L. Bough, aged nineteen years, and her sister Alice, three years younger, living at 11 Leslie street, partook of canned salmon for breakfast. During the day they experienced no ill effects, but both were taken ill in the evening with symptoms of poisoning. They screamed and moaned pitifully, tearing their hair and endeavoring to tear their clothing off. Two men could scarcely hold either of them. A doctor pronounced the case one of poisoning, and said several similar ones had come under his notice. The unfortunate young ladies remained in a precarious condition over Sunday, the younger one being especially affected, and both being mentally unbalanced and confined to bed. Monday afternoon Minnie recovered her senses, and the ill effects of the poison seemed to have left her entirely, but during the evening she was again suddenly attacked and has raved almost continuously since. The Misses Bough are the daughters of of Albert Bough, broom-maker. They were the only members of the family who partook of salmon.

DETAILS OF THE RACE.

The Committee Can Postpone a Race After Certain Hours.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Commodore James D. Smith, chairman of the America's cup committee, says the races will be started at eleven o'clock instead of 11:30, and the preparatory signal will be given at 10:50.

The course of the first, third and fifth races will be fifteen miles to windward or leeward and return and the second and fourth will be triangular. A time limit of six hours will be set. Sandy Hook lightship will be chosen as the starting point in all cases if possible. Should the direction of the wind make it necessary, however, the start will be made from a point farther off shore. No race will be started later than three o'clock in the afternoon. In case of a calm the start may be delayed until 1:30, after which the committee may exercise their discretion in regard to starting at all or postponing the race.

Unless something unexpected happens the racing days will be Sept. 7th, 9th, 11th, 13th and 14th should five races be necessary. There is still some doubt in regard to the last of these dates. It may changed by mutual consent.

To Meet The Deficit.

OTTAWA, Sept. 4.—The report of the city auditors upon charges made by ex-Ald. Cluff that the civic funds are not legally managed, states that the city finance system is good, but in the cases of some local improvement works which cost more than estimated, the rates which should have formed sinking funds have been partly used to pay interest on the extra cost, and so there is a deficit in these sinking funds amounting altogether to $46,000, which they recommended should be made up by a new special debenture.

Capt. Holmes, Napanee, engaged for some time in immigration work for the government, is here to receive instructions with reference to work during the fall.

A Canadian Stranded In Rochester.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Sept. 4. — George Ashley, a resident of Belleville, Ont., is penniless and without friends in Rochester, to him a strange city. He came here on Sunday to see the sights, and on labor day had a big time at the lake. At four o'clock this morning he complained to a policeman that he had been robbed of $6 in a West Main street saloon. A description of the alleged robbers was given, and this led to the arrest of Nelson Britton and J. Frank Cunningham, who had been out with Ashley on Labor day night. It could not be proved that the men were guilty, although Canadian money was found on the person of Cunningham. Ashley does not know how he will get home.

He has during his residence here made a host of friends whose good wishes will follow him to the limestone city.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

The Subject of Fees Considered—A Very Large Attendance.

The monthly meeting of the institute board was held last night. Present: Prof. Dupuis, chairman; E. J. B. Pense, John McIntyre, John McKay and A. Shaw.

The principal reported that 334 pupils had registered during the first week. The total registration throughout last year did not exceed 365. The probable attendance will be 360. Last year there were seventy-eight non-paying or exempt pupils; this year there are only fifty-one. Owing to a change in adding a Latin subject to the examinations, pupils were preparing now direct for second class certificates instead of taking a third only. This reduced the number of those taking a purely secondary English education. The fifty-one would in another year be practically reduced to a very few. This would decide the question of fees, independent of any agitation by public school board trustees or others. A request having been received from the city council to impose fees on all pupils, the matter was discussed. Some of the trustees felt that as they had given years of study to the care and conduct of the school and had been so successful that the attendance was steadily rising, it was a reflection upon them for the council to dictate a policy without a proper knowledge of the subject. However, the high school trustees are appointees of the council; and, therefore, feel bound in honor to obey their instructions. However, the matter was left over for a special meeting, to be held at the end of the month. The feeling of the board was that fees would be imposed on January 1st next, but that they would be graded, those for junior classes being placed at probably one-half of what is charged for the languages. There are only fifteen outsiders who are non-paying pupils, twelve from Frontenac and three from other places. The full cost of the twelve pupils is covered in the account rendered the county of Frontenac, which must be paid before November or action will be taken. Educational experts endorse the Kingston board in its steps in this matter and the county must pay. Many other counties have to pay in similar way.

It will be necessary now to engage another teacher, and a Kingston lady will likely be employed. A room will also have to be detached from the assembly hall in the attic for classes, and fifty seats were ordered as equipment for another classroom. The appointments of Mr. Ewing and Miss Jones to the staff were endorsed. Trees were ordered to be planted around the ground which have been levelled and seeded, and will next year probably be one of the handsomest school lawns in Ontario. The committee to purchase the lot in the rear of the school from the government was reappointed with instructions to do something this time or meet the condign censure of the board. A large number of accounts were passed.

IN MEMORIAM.

The Late Thomas Miller.

Thomas Miller, for over forty years a resident of Kingston or the vicinity of Kingston, died at his residence, 82 Lower Bagot street, at an early hour this morning. Although he had passed his eighty-first year at the time of his death, Mr. Miller enjoyed excellent health up till about a year and a half ago, when he was knocked down by his horse and received an injury to his head. Since then he has gradually failed and his death was not unlooked for.

Deceased was born in Queen's county, Ireland, in the historic year of 1814. He came to this country forty-eight years ago. He settled at once in Kingston and lived here most of the time since. He engaged in a good many kinds of work—carpentering, masonry, farming, in fact he could turn his hand to almost anything. He helped to put the roof on Kingston's city hall when it was building and nearly lost his life at the job. He slipped from the top of the roof and rolled down to the eaves-troughing before he was able to stop himself.

He was a member of St. James' church and a life-long conservative, though he took no active part in public matters. By his industry and thrift he was able to acquire wealth during his life-time, most of which he invested in real estate. He owned a number of terraces and other dwelling houses on Montreal and Bagot streets. His family consists of John W., San Diego, Cal.; Mrs. John Seale, Kingston; Benjamin C., Bobcaygeon, and the late T. T. Miller. Mrs. Miller died about thirteen years ago.

Duck Shooting.

Charles H. Corbett was shooting at Mud lake, Camden, on Monday, and bagged eight ducks. He says there were fifty guns in the woods. Ducks were shot before Sept. 1st, against the law, and if the inspector could get the names of the guilty parties he would have a grist.

A DESTRUCTIVE TYPHOON.

HUNDREDS OF VILLAGES SUFFERED THROUGH FLOODS.

A Great Loss of Life by the Fury of the Winds—Cholera is Doing Serious Damage—It Has Been Contracted on Ships—Traced to Bumboats.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 4.—A destructive typhoon of unusual fury spent its strength at Kuchinotsu, shortly before the last steamer sailed. All foreign ships in the harbor were blown ashore. With a few exceptions the houses in the town were entirely destroyed or partly wrecked. The wreckage, lashed by the awful fury of the gale, pounded to death hundreds of men, women and children clinging to the floating parts of the vessels littered over the sea. The loss of life was enormous. The crew of an American steamer spent the day in rescuing the drowning. A man named McGuire rescued a large number with a lasso from the lifeboat.

The damage done by floods in Gifu prefecture, Japan, is alarming, 618 villages suffered, 339 bridges were washed away, twenty persons were drowned and 22,226 persons received relief.

Cholera is spreading among the foreign shipping, and causing great alarm. The disease has broken out on the French ships Isly, Inconstant, Machias and Hanoa; on board the two Russian warships Zabaka and Bobre, nine patients dying out of fifty affected and on board the British steamer Ashdown. The two Italian steamers have also gone into quarantine with cholera on board. The disease in every case was traced to bumboats that supplied sailors with fruit. No American boats are yet reported affected.

HATS OF MULL.

Beauty and Comfort Are Combined in Hats For the Little Ones.

The little maid of to-day listens in wonderment to tales of grandma's childhood, and in her innocent way dreams of the children who roamed about with sunbonnets on their heads. She thinks they must certainly have been very queer.

But my little lady does not understand that she herself is wearing a sunbonnet. True it is not like those of yore. It has a new quality, that which the mother of the little maid strives to develop in her daughter.

It is emancipated. No longer is it made of hot gingham, which jars one's nerves every time it touches the ears neither is it coarse and ugly.

It is made of finest mull, in dainty colors, and trimmed with lace or Irish point embroidery. The sunbonnet is so light and cool that the little maid does not mind having it on her head in the least.

The crown of the bonnet is made very full, and a cape of embroidery hangs about the neck. A wide ruche, also of embroidery, encircles the face.

The little maid does not always wear sunbonnets, however. There is another style of head covering for her, and she wears it quite as often as the bonnet.

Again it is of mull, but this time over a stiff wire frame. The wires which form the brim are shirred inside the mull. Sometimes no mull is used for the brim, but instead, handsome embroidery which is stiffly starched. The embroidery is plaited, and falling in waves, makes a pretty framework for the baby face.

A bow of ribbon or mull of the same color as the hat, catches back the brim in the center of the front.

The Summer Girl's Fan.

The idea that the fan and its coquettish use originated with Eve in the Garden of Eden seems entirely consistent with its significance in the hands of the summer girl, providing she has become expert in the art of using it. When considered from a practical point of view it is a simple instrument for producing a cooling breeze, but as a means of conveying silent love messages it is certainly a poem without words. A young girl's summer outfit is not complete without a variety of pretty fans for use at all times of day and evening, and the dainty Empire fans are perhaps the prettiest of all. Excellent copies of these, made of fancy paper, are sold for a very small sum but the real beauty has a tortoise-shell or mother-of-pearl sticks, and is made of silk exquisitely painted in figures framed by a scroll of glittering paillettes. A Louis XVI. fan of black net is very effective with a painted silk medallion set into the center, the edge being of silk, in scrolls which spread out on the net. Silken medallions are a feature of the newest fans, and small fans of scented wood and dainty gauze very quaint with their illuminated sticks shutting up in the form of an ivy bough. Feather fans are much cheaper than they were and those with ostrich tips turning down from the top are the latest fancy. A real novelty is a fan of white net, scalloped on the edge and a satin medallion in the center, on which a dainty columbine is painted, and from this shining lines of gold spangles radiate. The white sticks glitter with gold and silver stars.

The Empire fans are small in size, but not in price, as the ivory, pearl and ebony sticks are inlaid with gold, while the mounts of hand-painted ribbon are divided by another strip of inlaid pearl. A black lisse fan, spangled with golden stars, is very effective with a black evening gown, and a fan de luxe is in natural ostrich feathers mounted with mother-of-pearl sticks inlaid with gold.

New Designs in China.

A London firm has lately produced a decided novelty for the table, which in these days, when all desire attractive and perfect appointments will be greatly appreciated. This consists of a dessert service, the "Auld Lang Syne" service, in beautiful blue spodi china, with landscape medallions in the center of each. This, of course, is not new, the novelty being that the designers are prepared to decorate with any desired landscape. So, should the purchaser be also the possessor of one of "England's stately homes," he may have his service decorated with sketches taken from the various points of beauty on his own domains, choosing himself the points of interest he prefers, and thus bequeath to his heirs a charming heirloom.

Another novelty furnished by the same establishment which will doubtless prove popular with the smart set, is a luncheon service prepared in any chosen racing colors. The dishes are wonderfully compact and apropos, being put together in sets of three, the stand of one forming the lid of the other. The size of the service must, of course, depend upon the number to be entertained.

Another item, not so much of a novelty, perhaps, is the new fireproof ware, which is a soft, dark green. The color is very beautiful and will be a pretty addition to any table, and without doubt will do away with the old color of dark red-brown ware so long in vogue. The safeties in this ware are especially pretty.

TO REMOVE IRON RUST.

A Process Which Does Not Injure the Most Delicate Fabric.

To remove iron mold or rust from any white cotton, linen, or other vegetable fiber, the following process is the best, as it does not injure the fabric: The spots are stretched over an earthen plate and moistened salts of lemon are then strewn over the marks and rubbed in with a bone or wooden spatula until the stain is removed, afterwards thoroughly rinsing in warm water to remove the acid. Nearly all stains and dyes will be discharged by oxalic acid; therefore, careful usage is necessary. Salts of lemon, salts of sorrel, oxalic acid, etc., is a very dangerous poison, and should be used with due caution.

Mildew is removed by first brushing off any loose mildew. Then a little common salt should be rubbed in, afterwards liberally sprinkled with powdered chalk, and thoroughly moistened with clean cold water. After this the articles should be slowly dried in the open air, and then rinsed, and if the marks are not removed the treatment should be repeated, possibly several times, but in the end the mildew will be removed.

Taken altogether, curtain dressing is not hard work, and may well be done at home in the majority of households, as what is most required is patience sufficient to secure careful manipulation. It is certain, also, that curtains carefully treated in cleaning and getting up have their durability much increased; indeed, some lace curtains have passed through my hands annually for the past ten years and are now sound and good, but they have never been framed.

Summer Responsibilities.

A mother with grown or half-grown daughters needs to exercise both tact and wisdom to shield them in a summer hotel or boarding house from foolish friendships and love affairs.

There is danger in the social freedom allowed to young people at summer resorts, and where there is a party of them there may be some with questionable characteristics.

It is not an easy matter for a mother to be always watchful and vigilant during the weeks that her mind ought to be easy and at rest if she would gain the full benefit from a needed summer outing.

Tired mothers can avoid this by selecting some quiet farmhouse or cottage for their family, if they are not equal to the care and responsibility which is sure to arise where any considerable number of young people congregate.

It is a safeguard for a mother to identify herself with her daughter's interests as far as possible, to be a friend with her friends, to be watchful of their out-door life, to guard against a close intimacy, to provide a useful and interesting occupation for the daughter a part of each day and to talk with her freely and confidentially of the laws of her being.

The time has passed when it was considered a want of delicacy in a mother to speak to her children of subjects essential to their future welfare. Knowledge is their right, and if the mother has done her part faithfully in this respect there will be less
