Help Along The Fair.

KINGSTON, Sept. 5th, 1895.—C. W. Wright, Esq., Mayor City of Kingston:

Dear Sir.—The directors of the Midland central fair desiring the co-operation of the citizens towards assuming the success of the fair this year would respectfully request you to call the attention of the citizens to the above and, if possible, have the merchants close their places of business for a half holiday on to-morrow, Friday, "Citizens' day."—Respectfully yours, J. P. OBAM, secretary.

J. MENZIES, president.

To the citizens of Kingston.—In accordance with the request of the management of the Midland central fair association I would respectfully ask that "Citizens' day," Friday afternoon, the 6th inst., be generally observed as a half holiday. I feel that our duty is to interest ourselves sufficiently in making "citizens' day" a grand success.—CLARK W. WRIGHT, mayor.

MIDLAND CENTRAL FAIR.

THE CROWD WAS LARGE—THE EQUAL OF TORONTO.

The Judging Completed in the Horse Ring—Mr. Shaw of Wentworth Has Something to Say—Special Features Written Up.

For other details see page two

The fourth day of the Midland Central fair did not give promise of fair weather. During the night a slight shower fell, and in the morning clouds overhung the sky and threatened the prospects which had been so high in the minds of the management. At nine o'clock, however, the sun began to show his welcome face, and in short order the clouds were dispersed and promise of good weather was had. Everything was put in apple pie order at the fair, for the biggest day of the exhibition, and early in the day the people began to come through the gates. Rigs came out from the asylum with inmates of that institution, who were shown through the palace and grounds by the attendants. They seemed to enjoy themselves on their circuit. The children from the orphans' home also made the rounds.

Senor and Senora de Ovies, palmists and mind-readers, established themselves in the north wing of the palace in the morning.

This is American's day and steamboat excursions brought a large number from Uncle Sam's domains. A great many Americans were on the ground yesterday afternoon also. Crowds from the country are here again, a great many coming from the vicinity of Odessa and Yarker interested in the ball game which these teams are to play to-day. It promises to be a good game of ball. The race track was dragged this morning and is in prime shape for the races this afternoon.

Some people say that the Midland Central do not have the display of stock which is to be found at some of the larger fairs. The management claim that it cannot be beaten at any fair in Canada, and this morning, in a conversation, R. Shaw, of Wentworth, the largest exhibitor of sheep at the fair, said that the Midland Central stock was the equal of that of Toronto, and that means the best in Canada, if not in America. The quantity may not be here, but the quality is strictly first-class in every respect. Mr. Shaw shipped his sheep to Toronto this morning. He takes the bulk of the premiums here in his classes.

The Wheel Of Progress.

Is shown in an exhibit by Creelman Bros., of Georgetown, manufacturers of the Blickensderfer typewriter. This exhibit is in charge of the Kingston representation, W. J. Herbison, 92 Frontenac street, and consists of a No. 5 Blickensderfer, with the carrying cases in oak and leather. This machine possesses full keyboard and carriage, weighs but six pounds, has less than 200 parts, and costs only $45. Yet it equals any of the high-priced machines in capacity and quality of work and excels them all in convenience. At the world's fair in 1893 the Blickensderfer received the unqualified approval of the judges as their report testifies. The practical testimony to its success is the unprecedented sale with which it is meeting. Clergymen, lawyers and business men generally pronounce it the writing machine par excellence. With this writing, interchangeable type wheels and direct inking roller, it is bound to take a leading place. Creelman Bros. manufacture also a full line of knitting machines at prices from $10 up, information regarding which may be had from Mr. Herbison.

Kingston Vehicle Co.

The Kingston vehicle works went to considerable trouble and expense in arranging their exhibit at the fair. At least one-third of the space in machinery hall is monopolized by the company. And a most magnificent showing it is. The two-passenger rigs, cutters and buggies captured the first prize for the best display, and one of the phaetons the mayor's special prize. There are nine different styles of buggies and three different styles of cutters on exhibition. A unique feature of the exhibit is a complete rig in the rough. All the parts are there in their rough form. This is the only exhibit outside of the palace that was decorated with flags, bunting, etc. Mr. Aylesworth is in charge of the exhibit.

George Mills' Display.

It is always a pleasure to inspect a good thing and this is principally the reason that the people crowd around George Mills & Co's exhibit. He has his old location in the palace and the arrangement of things is perfect. The exhibit includes ladies' and gents' fur coats, ladies' evening wraps, fur-lined—one of which lined with pure white thibet, was awarded the first prize. The raw skins from which the garments are manufactured are arranged on the walls and floors. Mr. Mills pays special attention to the importation of ladies' cloth mantles, and the second floor of his store on Wellington street is devoted exclusively to the display of these goods.

Windmill Exhibit.

The Aermotor Co., Chicago, has an exhibit of a pumping windmill on the grounds, the reputation of which machine is known throughout the country. It is a fact that more than half the windmills sold in the United States are turned out by this company. This is the best possible renownsend any machine could have. J. M. Caines, Glenvale, Ont., the local agent, is in charge.

Agricultural Implements.

Hughes & Son have an extensive exhibit of agricultural implements and windmills which comprises all the machinery necessary to the farm. Frontenac farmers know of the qualities of this firm's goods and the liberal patronage they have received in the past speaks for itself. An inspection of the stock is solicited.

R. S. Williams & Sons.

The R. S. Williams & Sons Co. (limited) have a show in the centre of the palace which is a credit to any firm. The instruments displayed are the finest in the market, being noted for their beautiful appearance, fine tone and lasting qualities. C. H. Forrester, Brockville, is in charge.

The boat will leave daily at three o'clock till Thursday of next week, including Sunday, but excepting Monday. Ask at Hanley's for athletic association tickets, providing the lowest fare on record.

The Attack Undeserved.

Signor de Ovies, psychologist, though favorably known in Kingston, was surprised on arrival yesterday to find a cloud upon his reputation. Principal McKay, of the business college, sought an engagement for him with a Methodist clergyman and from the Y. M. C. association, and was met in both instances by libellous statements affecting his character. He has been dealt a cowardly blow in his absence. In February last the Ottawa Journal attacked Signor de Ovies and even made reflections upon his wife. The Kingston News copied the article, although it frequently before had noticed the Signor favorably. The Ottawa Journal apologized but the Kingston News did not, as the vindictiveness which up to the recent change characterised the proprietorship was never punctured unless the complainant came unpleasantly close. Signor de Ovies remained in Ottawa for three months, lived down the attacks, increasing his friends on the press, in society and among the public. Seeing the newspaper injury done him in Kingston the new management of the News will assuredly regret it, and join the WHIG in assuring the public that the signor had done nothing to deserve the attack.

Rifle Association.

The annual meeting of the 14th batt. rifle association was held, last night, in the Fourteenth club rooms. In point of attendance and the interest manifested it was one of the best meetings ever held by the association. The election of officers resulted:

Hon. president—Lieut.-Col. W. H. Cotton, D.A.G.
President—Lieut.-Col. H. R. Smith.
Secretary—Capt. W. J. B. White.
Treasurer—Capt. A. J. Sinclair.

The match committee is composed of the executive officers and Capt. Hora, Lieut. Cunningham, Sergt.-Major Morgans and bandmaster Jackson. They have full power to act, and their decision is to be final.

Matches were arranged to come off at the Barriefield range on Friday, Sept. 13th.

The Way It Occurred.

The death of James Spooner at Glenburnie the other day was most unfortunate. The heavy market waggon was loaded for the city and stood in the drive shed. At the entrance to the shed there is an incline of a foot or more and Spooner pulled the waggon from the back to get it out of the shed. The suddenness of the incline was too swift for him and one of the wheels struck him forcibly in the abdomen. It was not at first considered that Spooner was seriously hurt and no medical assistance was brought in. Later in the evening the unfortunate youth suffered excruciating pain and Dr. Phelan was sent for. When the doctor arrived he at once told the boy's friends that he could not live. The intestines were terribly torn. He died yesterday morning.

At the City Hall.

"In North Carolina" was the name of the piece produced by the Marks Bros. last night in the city hall. It is a rather pretty little comedy drama, and one which, with a slight exception, was well adapted to the capacities of the company. Fred. H. Wilson did a capital old man's part, and although Tom Marks' part was not altogether suited to him, he made lots of fun out of it.

An attractive feature was the dancing of Baby Florida Wilson, a little tot, not yet four years of age. The company continues to play to very good houses, the hall last night being pretty well filled. To-night the piece will be "The Irish Detective."

Harry Lindley at Opera House.

Last night's house was a marked improvement on the previous ones and the performance seemed to give universal satisfaction. "The Castaways" has been seen here before on several occasions and duplicated its former success, whilst the wreck at sea was well put on. To-night there is a novelty introduced in the shape of a strong, sensational drama written by Oliver Doyd Byron and entitled, "The Inside Track." It is a picture of life in St. Giles and St. James, London, and during the action of the play there are five scenes, dock yard scenes, etc. There will be a matinee on Saturday afternoon, when "Jane" will be produced.

A Couple Married.

A pleasant marriage occurred at the residence of E. M. McKee, 322 Brock street, yesterday, when his daughter, Miss Nina, was united in marriage to A. E. Brough, Hammond's Port, N.Y. Miss Britton, Lindsay, acted as bridesmaid, and Fraser McCay, groomsman. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. E. Starr. The couple left for Port Hope and Rochester before going to Hammond's Port to reside.

STUDYING ART IN ENGLAND.

PROF. DAY BACK AFTER TWO MONTHS' ABSENCE.

He Talked With a Reporter Regarding His Outing—The Ocean Voyage was Very Disagreeable—Observations Touching Art—He Had a Narrow Escape—Visiting Old Friends.

Prof. Forshaw Day, instructor in free hand drawing and painting at the Royal military college, arrived home yesterday afternoon from England after a trip extending over a period of two months. He arrived home in company with J. McIver. The homeward voyage on the Lake Ontario was a rough and unpleasant one. They were buffetted by cold, head winds nearly all the way.

In the course of a pleasant conversation with a WHIG representative, last night, Prof. Day said that he went to England on business, but, incidentally, had a good deal of pleasure. He left here on July 3rd last and spent most of his time in London, with an occasional trip into the country. He was in London during the elections and he says that the scenes in the streets as the returns were received were indescribable.

"Oh, yes," said Prof. Day, "I derived a good deal of pleasure from my visit; but I had also some painful experiences." He then went on to describe one narrow escape he had had. It was at Preston Park, Brighton, on Aug. 5th, the occasion of a Foresters' demonstration. During a display of fireworks a bomb exploded in the crowd, killing a number of people and injuring several more. A boy belonging to his party had his leg torn from his body and a lady had her umbrella cut in two. A shower of rain had driven Prof. Day from the immediate vicinity of the disaster, otherwise he does not see how he could have escaped.

He visited the Bank of England and had the unique experience of handling enough bars of gold to represent millions of dollars. But what was of greatest interest to him was, doubtless, his visit to the exhibition of the Royal academy. The exhibition as a whole was not, he says, up to some of previous years; but the portraits were very fine. The water color society's exhibition was also excellent. He had a camera along with him and made some very good pictures. He also did some sketching, but had not very much time at his disposal for that work. One branch of art he was very much interested in was the photographic reproduction of black and white. He made a special study of several of the processes which he was able to examine and it is not improbable that readers of the WHIG will, before long, get the benefit of some of his observations in this line. The photographic reproduction of black and white for newspaper and magazine illustrating is one of the branches of modern art, in which marvellous progress has been made of late.

At Woolwich Prof. Day was the guest of Major-Gen. Hewett, commandant of the Royal military college, Woolwich, and at Chatham he was the guest of Major Mayne, R.E., of Capt. Van Straubenzie and of Lieut. Osborne, son of our townsman, George Osborne, and a graduate of the Royal military college.

"And did you hear our military college spoken of in England?" the reporter asked.

"Oh, yes. Our military college cadets are held in high esteem in England and Lieut. Osborne is doing wonderfully well."

There were quite a number of well-known Canadians on the home-coming steamer, including Col. Lazier and wife, of Belleville.

A Cry From Brockville.

Brockville Times.

If Kingston continues to manifest the grasping spirit it is showing in its eagerness to steal the Grand Trunk shops from here, the limestone city will have to be known as Hogtown or Wolfville. Kingston ought to be satisfied to have the penitentiary. But Kingston is plainly not contented.

[NOTE BY WHIG.—About a score of years since Belleville and Brockville bonused the Grand Trunk company heavily to rob Kingston of the shops in question. The unmitigated gall of the above article therefore stands out in bold relief. Kingston is but moving now to get back its own. Where is the characteristic of hog or wolf to be discovered in that action? Is it not rather seen in the foot prints of the original grab town? The Times has made a journalistic slump and deserves to be the laughing stock of Brockville.

Coming From British Columbia.

Vancouver, B.C., World.

Mrs. Cornwall, M.A., principal of the Kingston Ladies' college, who has been visiting in this city Dr. and Mrs. Mills, has returned to the east. She has visited many portions of British Columbia, which were of interest as well as a source of profit to the institution over which she presides. She carries back favorable impressions of British Columbia and especially of the coast cities. Her college is known far and near as a first-class boarding and day school for young ladies. The staff of teachers is a large one of university graduates. Here also are to be found all the refining influences of home, combined with high mental training. A number of young ladies hereabouts are to become pupils of Mrs. Cornwall and will leave for Kingston shortly.

The Poet's Revenge.

"I've brought you a little thing of my own," The poet meekly said;
The editor uttered a ghastly groan,
And shook his massive head.

"'Tis small, but so precious," the poet sighed;
The editor groaned once more—
He thought to himself that the poet lied,
As poets had done before.

The poet continued, though fiercer still
Became the editor's ghoulish glee;
"If you will not use it there's many will—
'Tis a ticket for 'She Couldn't Marry Three.'"
