The Bayfield is doing good work surveying on Lake Erie and is incalculable benefit to the marine interests. Many shoals have been located as wave never on the chart before.

Dr. Grant In Manitoba.

Toronto Catholic Register.

Principal Grant has very frequently illustrated freedom of speech amongst us, and when it was announced that the Globe, with characteristic enterprise, has engaged with him for the publication of a series of letters on the situation in Manitoba, no one could very well have doubted that the reverend doctor's correspondence would on this, as on many previous occasions, be found the undiluted independent article. Principal Grant is a practical man, willing, perhaps, to attribute to others his own honesty, and as an authority upon educational questions, more than ordinary value attaches to his opinions. In his letter he has avoided all the fine drawn rights and wrongs which only cloud the present main problem of education in Manitoba.

We have a very large assortment of good strong suits for the boys. Bring or send the boy and we'll treat him as though he belonged to us. Grand Union.

AMALGAMATION OF CLASSES IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

A Discussion in Regard to the Teaching of Work Required For Third-Class Certificates — The Majority Think Such Work Should be Done in the Collegiate Institute.

At last night's meeting of the public school board an animated discussion took place over a clause in the report of the school management committee, recommending that the classes now being taught by Miss Chown and Miss Crawford be amalgamated, with Miss Chown as teacher.

Mr. Shaw objected. For one reason it would make too big a class. For another reason the work of the two classes was very different, and it would be impossible to have both conducted in one room and give satisfaction.

Inspector Kidd said that the amalgamation of the two classes would give a new class of fifty-eight pupils. In this new class there would be three grades, and he believed it would be impossible to teach them with satisfaction, in one room. The amalgamation of the classes would mean that the pupils now in Miss Chown's room would leave it.

Chairman Donnelly asked inspector Kidd if he believed that amalgamation of the classes would be in the interests of the board.

Mr. Kidd—The great point is one with which I have nothing to do—the financial side of it. Speaking from a teaching point of view, I don't think good work could be done with these classes amalgamated. It would mean that Miss Chown's pupils, going up for third class certificates, would have to leave.

Dr. Fee did not want the fifth class driven out of the public schools; but he was not in favor of paying a high salaried teacher to take small classes alone.

G. Y. Chown wanted to insert an addition to the clause that the work of the class be that of public school leaving examination, but as this was not considered an amendment it was not passed.

Mr. Meek said he had been induced to support the proposed amalgamation of classes for the following reasons:

First—While the lower departments of the school system are crowded, the senior classes are thinly attended, so that without the experiment of trying to fill them the appointment of new teachers would not be justifiable.

Second—It is held to be expedient to amalgamate the fifth classes taught by Misses Chown and Crawford—the average attendance at which, by the latest records given to me is twenty-one and twenty-eight respectively—and so give the board the services of an experienced teacher for the next highest class which is available.

Third—A senior fourth class is now vacant, by the resignation of Miss Minnes, and it is thought best, in the interest of a wise economy we are expected to practice when possible, to have it filled by one of the present staff, so that only two teachers are needed, one to be appointed permanently and one temporarily.

Fourth—It is certainly not advisable to have sixteen classes as they are at present, with an average attendance of say forty-two, in rooms which should accommodate fifty each, and close to the time when it is proposed to appeal to the people for the money with which to erect a new school for which this board has made demand.

Fifth—Apart from this point it has to be remembered that for about a year these senior classes have not been filled, that it was expected they would have a better appearance after the mid-summer promotions, that expectations have not been verified, and it is not to be hoped the fifth classes can fill where the fourth classes have been so depleted by the entrance examination exodus.

"These," said Mr Meek, "are some of the considerations which have had their influence upon me and lead me to support this recommendation of the committee."

Mr. Shaw said that if the amalgamation of the two classes meant the shoving of one of them out of the school, it would be better to do it by a straight motion, instead of going at it in a roundabout way.

Mr. Kelly thought it would be unwise to alter the present arrangement and run the risk of having the work not done nearly so well. The attendance might not be as large in the senior classes as in some of the junior ones, but it should be remembered that the work was heavier.

G. Y. Chown pointed out that the board was not bound by the regulations to provide for high school primary examinations, but they were compelled to take up public school leaving work. The argument that had been put forth for taking up high school primary work in the public school was that it could be done more cheaply there than in the collegiate institute, but he held that it had been shown that this was not the case, that the work really cost less in the collegiate institute. The board, he argued, should, therefore, do away with this high school primary class, or else amalgamate it with another class and so bring down the cost. For himself, he was in favor of allowing the class to go to the collegiate institute.

Chairman Donnelly believed that the amalgamating of the two classes would have the effect of driving the high school primary class out of the public school. This, he believed, would be a mistake. The public school was the poor man's school, and the poor man's child should have an opportunity of trying that primary examination. He believed that it cost more to teach the primary work in the collegiate institute than it did in the public school, and he argued that it would cost the poor man more to send his child to the collegiate institute than to the public school. Better dressing would be required for one thing.

Mr. Elliott desired that the board should clearly and definitely teach everything that the education department required that it should teach, but no options. He looked not at the cost of the teaching of senior pupils but in regard to the little children whose health was a much desired consideration. He believed that the younger pupils should have as much room in the junior classes as the older ones in the senior classes. He wanted to see every pupil provided with a proper seat. This could not be done now with the senior classes only half filled. It would be necessary to double up and the best method was the one proposed in the report. If it did crowd some pupils into the collegiate institute, who ought to be there, so much the better. He believed that the public school work should go no higher than the public school leaving examination.

G. Y. Chown took no stock in the "poor man's child" cry; but he did not believe that a high school primary class in the public school was an advantage to the poor man's child. The work of this class prepared pupils for third class certificates and no higher. The pupil spent two years in this class and then, after teaching for three years, if he wanted to get a second class certificate, he would have to spend the same time over again in the collegiate institute, for the second class work would require at least four years to get up. If, then, the pupil, instead of remaining the two years in the public school, went at once to the collegiate institute and took up second class work, he would save two years. For this reason he held that the teaching of high school primary work in the public school was a disadvantage to the poor man's child.

Mr. Shaw said that since he had been on the board there had been attempts to drive out the fifth class from the public school. The parties who had made these attempts found out that they could not drive out the fifth form work, and then they raised the question, why teach high school primary work? He held that it was all fifth form work and that in teaching it the school was doing no more than it was required to do by the regulations. Furthermore, if there were twenty-three pupils taking up that work now in the public schools it was an evidence that there were twenty-three parents who preferred that their children should take up that work in the public school. He contended that English subjects could be taught better in the public school than in the collegiate institute, where so much attention had to be given to languages. He argued that it was as much the duty of the public schools to start a person on his way to make a living as a teacher as it was to fit him for office work or any other kind of work. Parents had urged him to seek for the continuance of the class. He knew those whose parents could not pay the fees at the collegiate.

Mr. Elliott enquired if it was understood that the parents of the twenty-three pupils mentioned were unable to pay fees at the collegiate? The chairman said it would not be well to seek information in regard to that matter. Mr. Elliott said that Mr. Shaw had been very sentimental in his remarks and the impression left was that the pupils in Miss Chown's class could not go to the collegiate. However, having disabused the minds of trustees on the point he would not press for an answer.

Mr. Chown desired to emphasize the statement that the public school was not required to take up high school primary work, but that it was optional.

Mr. Lambert believed that it would be in the interest of the poor man to send his children to the collegiate institute at once. Having different teachers for different subjects they had better facilities and were better equipped than the public school.

Mr. Bennett wanted the matter dealt with in a straightforward manner. If the clause was passed amalgamating the classes, it should be made known for the benefit of those taking up primary work that it could no longer be satisfactorily done in the public school. It would be an injustice to the pupils not to tell them this.

A vote was finally reached on the clause to amalgamate the two classes and it was carried by a majority of one. The vote was as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Anglin, A. F. Chown, G. Y. Chown, Elliott, Lambert, Meek and Sears—Seven.

Nays—Messrs. Bennett, Donnelly, Fee, Kelly, Shaw and Wilson—Six.

Mr. Galloway, the chairman of the board, absent from the meeting, is understood to be in favor of the amalgamation.

TO BE AT WORK AGAIN.

Manager Jackson Will Have the Cotton Mill Repaired.

James Jackson, manager of the Dominion Cotton Mill Co., Montreal, was in the city to-day. He was accompanied by J. Roberts, Montreal, the well-known contractor, who does most of the company's work. They paid a visit to the Kingston cotton mill this morning and made an examination of the wreck caused by Wednesday night's storm.

Mr. Jackson told a reporter that the work of repairing the building would begin at once. "We expect," he said, "to have the mill running a week from Monday," which would be on the 23rd inst. Mr. Roberts, on being appealed to, did not think there would be any difficulty in having the mill ready to run by that date. Of course the part of the mills containing the six spinning mules, that were damaged by the falling in of the roof, will not be ready then, and will not be ready for two or three months yet; but this will mean a loss of employment to only nine hands. The work done by these mules will be supplied for the time being from other mills belonging to the company. As many of the factory hands as are required will be kept on to help in the work of repair.

Mr. Jackson says that the cotton trade just now is very good. Prices are a little low, but there is good business.

Trip To The Old Country.

John Elliott, just returned from a trip to the old country, says the most striking feature of London to the visitor is the clean streets. The roads are as clean as our granolithic pavements. Mr. Elliott visited all the centres of interest in the British Isles and had a most pleasant six weeks of it.

MINING CLASS CLOSED.

Mr. Merritt Presented With an Address—A Fine Class.

A Rat Portage paper reports the closing of the mining class conducted there by W. H. Merritt, M.E., of the Kingston school of mines, and the presentation of an address to him on behalf of the class, thankfully acknowledging the benefits afforded and the knowledge gained as to the great mineral resources of the district, and appreciation. They expressed high regard for Merritt's personal qualities. They were pleased with the remarks of the commissioner of crown lands, who agreed with them as to the importance of having a collection of minerals placed on view at that point. They asked to have the benefit of Mr. Merritt's knowledge in their selection and co-operation of the school of mines in Kingston, in assisting in this desirable work. Mr. Merritt replied in appropriate terms, and the members of the class, which numbered 140, hoped that he may return next year. It is also expected that quite a number of the pupils will attend the school of mines in Kingston during the winter term.

Additional News Of the Storm.

The chimney on the double house of the Doran estate, Cataraqui street, was blown down, as was also the chimney on one of B. W. Folger's houses on Orchard street, below Carrington's residence.

The damage to the athletic grounds bicycle track will amount to about $125. The wind got under the track and raised it up. A gang of men has been put on to get the track in readiness for the bicycle meet.

They Gathered In The Bark.

Ex-ald. McLeod, who has rented Ford's tannery, this morning had the police looking up several culprits near the cotton mill who had carried away a lot of his tan bark. The bark had been blown from the cars into Mallan's wood yard and then people gathered it up next morning and were using it for fire wood. The affair will probably result in a police court case.

Was Severely Injured.

Miss Welch, injured by the falling of freight shed roof at Cape Vincent, arrived over on the Cape Vincent boat last night. She was removed to her home on Division street. The unfortunate young woman was suffering great pain, her head being severely injured. The rumor of her death was circulated yesterday, but we are pleased to find it was unfounded.

The Captain Suspended.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Secretary Herbert this morning announced the action taken in the case of Captain George Sumner, U.S.N., recently tried by court-martial for the careless docking of the cruiser Columbia at Southampton, England. Captain Sumner is suspended from duty six months and giving waiting orders pay during that period.

The Water Pipe All Right.

John Donnelly, jr., and diver Matt. Murphy completed at noon to-day the examination of the city intake water pipe. Every bit of the 2,520 feet of pipe, from the shore to the crib was examined and found to be in first class condition. The mouth of the pipe was found to be clear from weeds and obstructions of every kind.

Destroyed By Fire.

BRAMPTON, Sept. 13.—Andrew Giffin, fourth line Chinguacusy, had his barn and outbuildings entirely consumed by fire about ten o'clock this morning. All the season's crop was lost; stock saved. Loss about $3,000; small insurance. It is thought fire was caused by a hot journal on a windmill power close to the barn.

Shot His Wife.

GRAND LEDGE, Mich., Sept. 13.—Frank Forbes, manager of the Forbes & Ward dramatic company, playing an engagement in this city, went on a spree yesterday. He quarrelled with his wife, and shot her. Mrs. Forbes will probably die.

MENNONITES IN MANITOBA.

PRINCIPAL GRANT WRITES OF THEIR SCHOOLS.

They Want the Bible Taught and in German Too—Gradually Coming Over to the Public School System—A Delicate Situation to Deal With.

Principal Grant publishes in Thursday's Globe a three column letter, giving details of his inspection of the Mennonite schools in Manitoba. Among them there appears to be, as in the case of the French-Canadians, a religious question and a race question. The Mennonites want the bible taught in the schools, and want it taught in German. An additional difficulty is that the Mennonite flying from Russian tyranny is "again the government," and shrinks from having relations of any kind with it. In Russia, says Dr. Grant, "they knew of the government only as a resistless external force. Their security against it was the czar's promises not to interfere with their privileges. They felt that the condition of things in Canada was pretty much the same, and that their wisdom lay in holding aloof from everything with which a resistless government had to do, following their own use and wont, and trusting that the government would keep its promises. That they themselves were part of the government was a conception that has hardly dawned on their mental horizon yet. When the thought was presented to them it was as unwelcome as new truths always are. They shrank back from the dangers and responsibilities which it involved." It would appear that they are gradually but very reluctantly coming over to the public school system. "They are a people who may be led but cannot be driven," and in order to lead them we are told the government seems willing to evade the spirit and stretch the letter of the law." Dr. Grant says "their private schools impart no intellectual awakening. Even the religious instruction has little moral force, though hours are spent daily on bible reading and catechism drill. When reading is mechanical and the only interpretation allowed is a church catechism the memory may be stuffed, but character is not formed. Hence it is that when the Mennonite young men break away (as they are doing when they come in contact with the rest of the community) from the unlovely feudalism in which they were raised they become 'the toughs,' or the drunken, riotous and dishonest element of the place. Freedom means license to them, for no principle of self-government was nurtured under the rigid yoke to which they were subjected. There is such admirable moral fibre in the stock to which they belong that it may be hoped that this license will be only temporary," etc.

Here, it will be admitted, is a delicate situation to deal with. It looks like a case for skilful, sympathetic, delicate treatment by persons who are on the spot and are thoroughly acquainted with all the conditions. We find here a fresh argument against interference from Ottawa. The remedial order makes no provision for the case of the Mennonites. We fancy that there is no pretence that the federal government or parliament have anything to say in that matter at all. Yet the Mennonites are an important feature of the Manitoba situation, and their case ought to be considered by anyone who undertakes to deal with it. Action from Ottawa must necessarily be partial, imperfect, spasmodic, and it is for this reason that it is likely to do more harm than good.

BROUGHT HIM TO TIME.

Brief Note That Brought a Long-Winded Speaker to a Full Stop.

Henry Watterson tells the story of Hon. B. Lawless, a former member of the Louisville bar, and who came from Glasgow, Ky. He was a "long-winded" talker, and when he arose to make an argument did not know when to stop. On one occasion he was making a speech before Judge Ballard, in the United States court. He had spoken several hours and the judge and everybody else were thoroughly tired out, though they were helpless.

At last Judge Ballard beckoned his brother, Jack Ballard, to him and implored him to stop Lawless, if he could.

"Oh, that's easy enough," replied the brother; "I'll stop him inside of three minutes."

There was a great deal of curiosity to see how this could be accomplished, as the orator seemed to be nowhere near the end of his speech. Jack Ballard took a pencil and a sheet of paper and wrote:

"My dear colonel: As soon as you finish your magnificent argument, I would like you to join me to see Lillian Kennedy in 'She Couldn't Marry Three.'"

The note was handed to the orator who paused at the end of a soaring period, drew his glasses from his pocket and read the note. He put it in his pocket and said:

"And now, if it pleases your honor, and you, gentlemen of the jury, I leave the case with you."

The Tennis Tournament.

Below are the results of yesterday's matches in the tennis tournament:

LADIES' SINGLES.

Miss Norton-Taylor defeated Miss Hora 6-1, 6-2.

LADIES' DOUBLES.

Miss Drury and Miss Steers defeated Miss Campbell and Miss Hora 6-0, 6-2.

GENTLEMEN'S DOUBLES, SEMI-FINALS.

Dr. Clarke and J. Gage defeated Dr. Forster and R. Irving 6-2, 5-7, 6-3.

Arthur Smith and D. S. Robertson defeated W. H. Norton-Taylor and George Harvey, 6-2, 7-5.

The average of the playing yesterday was very good. The set, Dr. Clarke and J. Gage against Dr. Forster and R. Irving, was very fine. No better tennis has been seen in this city.

To-morrow afternoon the final singles for both ladies and gentlemen will be played, after which the distribution of prizes will be made and the tournament be brought to a close.
