A DRY AND HOT SUNDAY.

It is doubtful if this city has ever seen a mid-September day like yesterday. The heat and the excise enforcement combined served to make the city look like a desert or a town stricken with the plague. There was a large exodus from town, the steamboats which had not discontinued their trips carrying large crowds. The Bowery was deserted and on Broadway at three o'clock there, were counted just twenty persons from 34th to 23rd streets, and these looked as if they wished they were someers. The rest of the streets were on a parwith this, and New York was deserted. port a missionary for seven years at $900 | There is no doubt that the police have won, and New York is "dry."
