ABOUT HYPNOTISM.

DISCOVERIES OF DR. LUYA, THE FRENCH HYPNOTIST.

Diagnosis of Disease by Means of Hypnotic Subjects—Transference of Emotions From One Person to Another.

It happened one day a strange coincidence that my patient in search of the greatest workshop of the greatest hypnotist in the world should take me to the same part of the city...

Dr. Luya is one of the most remarkable men in Paris. He is a Frenchman, but he is well known to be an American, and a mighty fine American at that.

He is a Frenchman, but he is well known to be an American, and a mighty fine American at that. Dr. Luya is one of the most remarkable men in Paris.

Dr. Luya took up hypnotism about twelve years ago. He was a student of the beginning of his revival in France. He has devoted almost all his time to it and to the study of the human mind...

Most of the Doctor's discoveries have been brought about by his work with two especially good hypnotic subjects named Gabrielle and Esther. Both came to him at the hospital to be cured of nervous disease.

One of the first things which the Doctor discovered through his work with Esther was that the hypnotized subject could be made to believe in anything he wished. These are identified by color. While the subject is in the state known technically as "trance," the person for whom she looks at the top of the head...

would be if he had drunk ten times that quantity of that liquor. Figure 5 shows how a taste of ordinary pepper affected her when held to the end of her nose. She is smiling. When applied to the nose, she is in figure 6, the pepper brought the expression of a frightened woman. These illustrations might be multiplied indefinitely.

What all this means has not yet been determined. Just as the hypnotized person can be made to believe in anything he wishes, so he can be made to believe in anything he wishes.

And now we come to what I have already referred to when I said that in this article I would try to give you a glimpse of one of the most amazing and wonderful discoveries of the time. The Doctor found that the above a piece of iron wire, into the shape of a horseshoe and fastened with straps adjusted so that when it is in place they let it fall about as low as the temples and no lower. He placed this on his own head and came forward with a look of intense interest.

"It is a tank for the storage of magnetism. You see, you are very simple. It is merely a big horseshoe magnet. I can snare you and draw your anger from you and put it in this bit of curved iron. I can please you and draw your anger from you and put it in this bit of curved iron. I can find you melancholy, and with this I can relieve your melancholy. I can find you good nature, transferring it to me, and with this I can find you good nature, transferring it to me.
