...heard a child cry... "Dash!" he cried... "Why so restless, old dog, nothing human is near our hut this wild night?"

The ruddy glow from the burning pine lights up the interior of his lonely house... "Come to lunch," a clear, well-remembered voice exclaimed...

"Oh, how pleasant, dreamy, aimless days we glide gently along, our light craft, so useless as the shadow sweeping over yonder field of grain..."

"The mist rolls over, the sleeper sighs and murmurs and some other scene arises from out of the distance of the past..."

"Where in the name of all that's wonderful did these wanderers come from? We are a mile from land and sixteen from the shore..."

"The child was playing with the long silky ears of the dog as Dick entered, he looked up and smiled..."
