iome Interesting Information Regardiz the Association, Its History, Its Fine Buildings, Its Scope and Its Methods of Work-Plans For the Convention. Representatives of more than a quarter tion, and the sessions are to continue for four days. The delegates will come from all parts of the United States and Canada. Each local branch is entitled to one representative for every 100 members, up to 10, that being the limit. Besides these gentlemen, there will be the international committee, each member of which is a delegate ex officio to the convention.

This will bring somewhere near 500 delegates to the convention. The purpose the gathering is to bring together a large number of men who are prominent in the various branches of Y. M. C. A. work. They are all live, energetic men, and will go to the convention with valuable ideas to be selected to the place, and he not only has the satisfaction of heing engaged in a good work, but he knows that if he doubles the membership of his branch and builds a new home for it he will be promoted to a larger and more important field. At the head of the associations in the United States and Canada is the international committee, which has its headquarters in New York city. This committee is composed of 42 members, all representative Christian laymen, who are assisted in their work by a force of 30 secretaries. In this committee are such men as Cornelius Vanderbilt of New York, Frederick B. Pratt, son of the Brooklyn millionaire and phi lanthropist; Cyrus H. McCormick, the Chicago "reaper king," and Joshua M. Levering, the Baltimore coffee importer. who was the Prohibitionist candidate for president last fall.

The international committee is the executive factor of the organization. It was organized 31 years ago and originally consisted of only five members, but its numbers have been increased until now, besides the 42 regular members, there are 15 advisory members, 52 corresponding members in as many different states and provinces, and 15 trustees, who handle all be-Full staff of University graduates.
