GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Ex-President Harrison May Be Moderator of the Assembly, Which Opens May 20 at Winona, Ind .- A Harmonious Gathering Expected.

Once a year the Presbyterians in this country, represented by delegates chosen for the purpose, meet in general assembly and transact such business as the conduct of a great church organization demands. There are about 1,000,000 followers of Calvin all told, and they are represented in the general assembly by about 600 delegates, of whom 300 are ministers and the rest lay members.

This year the general assembly will open May 20 at Winona, Ind. This place was formerly a summer resort, but two years ago it was purchased by a number of wealthy Presbyterians, who formed the Winona association and inaugurated a summer school, which it is the intention to make the Chautauqua of the west. Mr. Studebaker, the millionaire wagon manufacturer, is president of the association.

Winona itself is situated on the shores of Eagle lake, about two miles east of erford, have sold their gold mine along the Warsaw, Ind. There are 160 acres in the | north shore of Lake Superior at a profit of grounds, and nearly $200,000 has been $10,000. W. There are, however, several distinguished divines who will also be named, and it has been the custom to choose the moderator from among the wearers of the cloth.

Presbyterian publications have been declaring in advance that this session of the general assembly is to be noted for peace and harmony. They say that there are no sensational heresy trials to come before the assembly, such as the Dr. Briggs prosecution. If these predictions are fulfilled, the assembly will certainly be a unique one, for the Presbyterians are apt to hold strongly to their opinions, and as these are not always unanimous, the sessions are usually marked with stirring debates.

If there is to be no contention, then either the liberals or the conservatives must have buried the hatchet. This is hardly probable, for at the last general assembly the former won their first victory in many years by electing their candidate for moderator, and the conservatives could hardly be expected to give in this time without a struggle. There is apt to be a sectional division on other points than the election of a presiding officer.

Then there is the committee on temporality, which is expected to give its opinion as to whether or not men who are not members of the church should be allowed to fill church offices. It has been the practice in the past to allow men to act as trustees who are not church members. Dr John Fox of Brooklyn, author of two books which have recently attracted considerable attention, is chairman of this committee. Another committee, of nine, will report on the work of the home missionary board and recommend ways and means for ex-

It is barely possible that the old question of the admission of women as lay delegates to the general assembly will be again tend the Winona assembly, and it is reported that the sentiment in favor . heir cause has been increasing and may have become powerful enough to win the day. It is not probable, however, that this issue will be given the prominence which it has attained in the general conferences of the Methodist church in years past. The proposed union of the Reformed church with the Presbyterian church is almost certain to be brought up and once more discussed. It is not expected that the Presbyterians will offer any opposition to the union. The doctrines and faith of the two bodies are much the same, and the union of all the Calvinists would make a large and powerful organization. The coming assembly is the one hundred and ninth and will be one of the few which have been held in the west. Besides the 600 delegates it is anticipated that a large number of Presbyterians who will have no voice in the proceelings, but who are nevertheless interested in its doings, will be present. Owing to its nearness to Chicago, many members of the church from that city will attend, and excursion trains will be run not only from Chicago, but from points in Indiana. It is probable that fully 6,000 persons in all will gather on the grounds. The members of the Winona association are making extensive preparations for the reception and entertainment of a large crowd, for they wish to produce a pleasant impression on the elder There will be opportunities for sailing on the lake, and steeds may be held for the delectation of the delegates.

The above story of adventure is having a wonderful run in England. The first edition was exhausted on the day of publication. The second edition did not last a week and a third and larger edition was immediately called for. The story itself is worthy of its remarkable success. The scene is laid in that debatable land between British Guiana and Venezuela. is a vast wilderness of forest and plain, wild, unknown, penetrated only by cances, containing possibly hidden treasures, a floating population, and mysteries which to-day tempt—the imagination as they did in the old days of the conquistadors."

For nearly 70 years Miss Alice A. Holmes of Jersey City has struggled total blindness against poverty, and now, when she is about ready to give up the struggle, she has inherited a big fortune. Though blind, Miss Holmes is a poetess o. some local celebrity, but her income has been mainly derived from the fees which she has earned as a teacher of music.

In 1848 she published her first volume, which she called simply "Poems of Alice Holmes." The modest little book attracted considerable attention from the reviewers, for it is unusual to find a blind authoress. Later she published two more volumes of poetry, "Arcadian Leaves" and "Stray Leaves." She also tried her hand at prose and published one novel, entitled "The Lost Vision," in which she told in a simple, sincere manner the story of her sight less life. He had gone west when young man and had acquired nearly half a million in mining and business. She does not yet know what the amount of her share will be, but it is estimated that it will be about $300,000. She says that she will devote her money wholly to the relief of the afflicted. She wants to have books printed in raised type and put within the reach of the blind. She says there are enough Bibles, but that standard works of fiction and history, which she takes such great delight in reading, are most hard to get, and these she means to have repro-

In Coldwater, Mich., there is another aged poetess who is not blind, but who has attracted some attention from the fact that at the age of 92 she is in the possession of all her faculties and is still writing poetry. She is Mrs. Celinda Cushman, and at a recent gathering of her children and grandchildren she read some verses which began as follows:

Time Was No Object, and He Gained His Point at Last.

The patience of the average Arkansas farmer is abnormal. He is never in a hurry, and he thinks things are bound to come right if he only waits. He accepts with resignation whatever destiny has in store for him and implicitly believes that circumstances make the man and not that man may make circumstances and thereby have any hand in the making of himself. The writer in passing through the hills of upper Arkansas found his progress stopped by a swiftly flowing river. Toward the center of the river was a team, a wagon and a man. The team was stationary and water eddied and foamed around it. The man was complacently smoking a pipe. Pushing his horse out into the ourrent, the writer approached the team and the man evinced a languid interest in his

The rider fastened one end of a rope to the tongue of the wagon and the other end to the pommel of his saddle. The vehicle was straightened out and the horses sprang forward under the lash. Soon the farmer and his team were safely landed.

"Didn't it occur to you to unhitch your horses and go for help?" was asked. "Well, if I'd 'a' done that I'd 'a' got wet," was the calm response. - Detroit Free
