Arrested At Windsor.

WINDSOR, Ont., May 4.—About three o'clock this morning ex-mayor D. W. Maton, ex-alderman Peter McEwan, Thomas Thompson and W. J. Brett, late proprietor of the Queen's grocery, which he purchased from ex-mayor Maton, were arrested, charged with removing the fixtures from the Queen's grocery. The warrants for the arrests were obtained by ex-mayor O. E. Fleming, owner of the block in which the grocery is located. Mr. Fleming claims the fixtures are his property. The quartette remained in the lock-up until nine o'clock this morning, when they were released by police magistrate Harriot on $200 bail each, to appear for examination to-morrow (Wednesday) morning. The arrests have caused quite a sensation, as the parties are all well known.

TO CONTINUE THE WAR.

This is The Policy of Greece's New Cabinet.

THE SUFFERING IS TERRIBLE

THE ARTA INHABITANTS VERY NEARLY STARVING.

The Recall of Col. Vassos—A Graphic Account of a Battle at Pentepigadia—All Prestige Gone From The Greeks—Demoralized for a Very Small Cause.

LONDON, May 4.—The chief points of interest in the situation at present are: First, that the decision of the ministers who have returned from the Greek frontier seems to be in favor of a continuance of the war; and second, that fighting continued almost incessantly at Velestino from last Tuesday until Sunday, with the result that Gen. Smolenski has been prevented from actually assuming his new duties as chief of staff. As a further result the Greeks at Velestino have managed to retain their positions, but they are so much fatigued to follow in their tracks. Although fourteen officers have been recalled from Crete to be sent on to Thessaly, and this also is a proof of the intention of the new cabinet to continue the war. The movement is actuated by necessity. All the best officers are being sent to the front, nor is there any intention yet displayed to evacuate Crete.

The Turkish army is advancing in three columns on Paraisalos, while an additional column is operating in the direction of Volo. As the Volo column could easily take Velestino in the rear, the Greek position is very precarious. This probably explains the retention of Gen. Smolenski there, as it was natural to expect him to go to Paraisalos to assume the supreme command. Everything points to an inevitable retreat by the Greeks on Domokos.

LONDON, May 4.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail at Arta says: "One of the worst mistakes the Greeks have made has been the casual and intermittent character of the attack upon Prevesa. Its capture was essential if the Greeks meant business in Epirus. To capture so strong a place by the means adopted was quite impossible, and now the opportunity is lost altogether. Instead of the desultory firing, which enabled the Turks to repair damage about as fast as it was done, the town should have been attacked with determination with the combined naval and military forces. Arta is now deserted, its wretched inhabitants living in the fields behind the town, many of them on the verge of starvation. Nothing is procurable in the way of food except a scanty and uncertain supply of bread. Women and children are suffering horribly with cold and hunger, and to these tortures is added the dread of a Turkish attack at any moment."

ATHENS, May 4.—The Greek government has recalled Col. Vassos from Crete. He will be replaced in command of the Greek forces in the island by Col. Staikos.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 3.—Word has been received here that a Turkish detachment from Trikala has occupied Kardissau.

Graphic Account Of A Battle.

LONDON, May 4.—A despatch to the Daily News from Patras, on the west coast of Greece, and not far from Arta, dated Sunday, gives a most graphic account of the battle between the Greeks and the Turks at Pentepigadia, Epirus, and the retreat of the former from that place. It shows the rout and panic of the Greeks at Pentepigadia as complete as the stampede which followed the fighting at Tyrnavos and the retreat at Larissa and Pharsalos, in Thessaly.

The Daily News correspondent says: The net effect of the Greek retreat to Arta is that each army is now in the position which it occupied before war was declared, but with all prestige gone from the Greeks. The latter had held the hill near Pentepigadia on Wednesday evening against fierce Turkish attacks. The Greeks obviously needed to be reinforced, but, although considerable forces were near, no help was sent. On Thursday morning the Turkish fire was brisker and our guns on the crest of the hill, for some reason, were silent. The fury of the fire culminated at 3:30 p.m. The Turks' fire was easily distinguishable by reason of the sharper crack of the Martini rifles and it developed in the space of a quarter of an hour into the most terrible roar ever heard in any battle, diminishing to a fusillade in three-quarters of an hour. The Turks in the meanwhile were massing on the slopes on our right front, preparatory to rushing the hill. Yet our guns on the central hill were silent after twenty minutes, and were withdrawn. I asked a sergeant where the guns were going and he replied, "To a better position." As a matter of fact they were being hurried back to Hanopolis fast as the mules could take them.

The Evezones of the crest of the hill made a gallant reply to the murderous fire and held out manfully, losing 100 men, until five o'clock, when cheers began to mingle with the roar of the Martini's; a moment later the Evezones tumbled over the crest, firing as they came, the Turks following and firing incessantly as the killed men ran down the hill-side. It only remained to make good our retreat.

The Turks continued to pour a smart fire on the houses. The latter eagerly responded, but it was obviously useless. Then someone gave an order and the Evezones, with a groan of disgust, left their position and moved suddenly, though in perfect order.

The correspondent for the Daily News then describes the light of the Greeks before the Turks. He then says: "When I left Arta on Friday morning the Greeks had not a gallant reply to the Turkish side of the river Arakphos. I have never seen men so demoralized for so small a cause. They had neither the enemy nor felt his fire. Yet 11,000 men and forty guns melted away. Had the Turks pursued the fugitives much farther, accompanied as they were by the peasantry, women and children, and 30,000 sheep, besides cattle, the massacre would have been awful."

Paris, May 4.—Athens despatch to the Egean asserts that King George is suffering from cardiac spasms, and that his physicians insist that a change of air is necessary. A trip to the island of Syra is recommended.

IT WAS MEMBERS' DAY.

The Late Appointments—Sir Charles Tupper's Inquiry Answered.

OTTAWA, May 3.—The sitting of the house to-day was both short and devoid of incident, whilst the benches on both sides were comparatively empty. A number of private bills were passed in committee, or read a second time, by Sir Charles Tupper, in moving for the return of the papers relating to the matter, complained that a number of recommendations of appointments which he made before leaving office and which had been assented to by the governor-general, had never been acted upon, the intended appointees having received no notification whatever. In stating the position of his government Mr. Laurier said that the papers when brought down would show that except in a few cases the appointments had been approved of. The house adjourned at six o'clock.

In reply to a question by Mr. Clarke, Mr. Laurier said that he had reason to believe that the directors of the dominion exhibition had been informed by the minister of agriculture that the government did not see its way clear to giving any financial aid to the dominion exhibition this year.

In answer to Mr. McLennan (Glenary) the premier said that the cost of establishing the manufacture of binder twine in the Kingston penitentiary, including machinery, labor and all other expenses connected therewith, was $40,280. In 1894 and 1895 four officers and forty convicts had been employed, the salaries paid the former aggregating $3,620 per annum, while in 1896, when three officers had been employed, $2,800 was paid. Five hundred tons of binder twine had been made since August last, the cost being $100,000. The government was now considering whether the manufacture of binder twine at the penitentiary should be continued.

An interesting question was raised as to the senate's composition. In a debate last year Mr. Laurier had stated that the bargain made at confederation was that the senate should be composed of members of both parties in the same ratio in which they were represented in the country, and should not be the packed house of either party. Sir Charles Tupper, replying to this to-day, argued that the arrangement between Hon. George Brown and Sir John Macdonald that the first appointments should be made with due regard to a fair division between liberals and conservatives was incidental to the coalition, and that the rule for the apportionment of seats in the upper house, to this day, was a good rule to follow in the formation of the senate it would be hard to prove that it was not equally just, fair and reasonable in making appointments for all time. What reason or public policy could there be for making the senate the packed body of one party?

There was no reason, except the fact that the senate had long been the refuge of defuncted politicians. Whether or not the method of maintaining the balance of political power in the senate adopted at confederation can be regarded as a precedent binding upon future governments is perhaps open to argument, and Mr. Foster and Mr. Davies followed it up, each in support of his leader.

As to the justice of Mr. Laurier's contention that the senate is as a whole responsible body it must be a reflex of the political views of the people. At the present time it is nothing of the sort. About seventy-five per cent. of the members of the electorate of Canada at the general elections or subsequent bye-elections have declared their allegiance to liberalism. It will take twenty years of liberal rule, perhaps more, to secure in the upper chamber the proportionate representation to which the party is entitled.

The Capital Things.

OTTAWA, May 4.—The Ottawa mining and milling company has decided to erect a huge customs stamp mill for gold ores on the Dick and Banning water power, about four miles from Rat Portage and in the very heart of the mining district.

It is just possible that the government will propose with the tariff resolutions for a few days so as to permit of other business being advanced a stage.

Mrs. Hays was presented by the countess of Erroll.

In the executive session of the United States senate yesterday Mr. Morgan opposed the ratification of the arbitration treaty on the ground that any agreement that would assure England against any hostilities on the part of the states would be of great benefit to Great Britain in the present complicated state of European affairs, and he did not think the United States was under any obligation to aid England to that extent. The treaty will be voted on to-day.

"Won't Insure 'Pin Flats.'" TORONTO, May 4.—The insurance companies chartered in Canada have decided not to insure barges known as "pin flats" carrying grain. The "pin flats" carrying a grain between Prescott and Montreal have a gross carrying capacity of 500,000 bushels. If the "pin flats" are excluded the grain will have to be taken to Montreal by railway, which, it is claimed, would mean making the St. Lawrence route prohibitory and would drive the grain trade to Buffalo.

REMINISCENCES OF KINGSTON.

First Steamers On The Lake—Kingston Amusements In Early Days.

The Rockwood Review, in Grandfather's Corner, continues its reminiscences of Kingston eighty years ago. It speaks of the opening trips of the Frontenac, the first steamer on Lake Ontario. The fare from Kingston to Toronto and Niagara was $12. Near the close of the season of 1817 machinery arrived from England for another steambot, under construction at Bath. She was launched the following spring and named the Charlotte. Henry Gistler, her master builder, had been assistant builder of the Frontenac. Next boat to appear on the lake and river route was at Bathousie, commenced in 1819. Prior to this all travel was by stage.

Speaking of Kingston's amusements Grandfather tells how in June, 1815, Mr. Stewart gave a surprising exhibition of horsemanship, quite equal to anything seen in the Old West show. The news-catcher and the people thought his performance nothing short of miracles. They began at five o'clock precisely, a proof of the truly good habits of primitive Kingstonsians. An "elegant museum" was advertised for a few days at Oliver Thibodot's hotel, one of the wonders being an organ with marionette figures. In 1815 the officers of the regular garrison and navy established a race meeting with liberal prizes and then opened the theatrical season. Tickets for the performance were $1 and over; doors opened at six and the curtain rose at half past six in this old town of steady habits, but then they had no gas and electric lights, and candles were rather dim to perform by. The opening pieces were the comedy "Speed the Plough" and farce "The Toothache." So crowded was the hall on that evening that some people had to hold their tickets for future performances. In the winter of 1815-16 at least fifteen different plays were produced, including a special performance for the benefit of widows and orphans of the brave men who had recently fallen at the battle of Waterloo.

GOOD STROKE OF POLICY.

To Be the First to Give Lady Aberdeen a Degree.

Montreal Witness. Queen's university the first in Ontario to admit women to the lecture rooms has set the example of conferring honorary degrees on women, and the others will probably not be slow in imitating her. It was a good stroke of academic policy to select lady Aberdeen for the honor, not merely because she is personally popular, but because she has taken so active and public a part in the woman movement, and most of all because she has acquired a high reputation for making appropriate academic speeches. At Chicago university a few weeks ago and at Queen's more recently she made addresses which show that she has a sound ideal of culture in general and of the higher education of woman in particular. A very large proportion of those young women who go through our universities are aiming at training for professional work, and especially for teaching; but the ranks of secondary teachers are now over-crowded, and a university course is not very attractive in the eyes of the public school teacher who expects to work for a salary of from two to three hundred dollars a year. Lady Aberdeen's theory, that a university education, other things being equal, make a woman fitter for the discharge of her duties as wife and mother, is the right one, if the education is all right. If there are any defects in the latter she best way to expose them is to apply to them her criterion and to modify the system where experience indicates that it needs amendment.

Shot Himself Dead.

SHREBURN, Ont., May 4.—An old lady named Dean, living in Protton township, back of Dundalk, was accidentally killed on Friday. Two daughters, who were living opposite, were visiting Mrs. Dean and took possession of a revolver. The old lady was taking it away from them when it accidentally exploded, the bullet lodging in Mrs. Dean's body, killing her instantly. Coroner Norton, after inquiry, decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Growing All the Time.

It never has been possible, it never will be possible, to confine business within certain limits or to portion it out between stores on an equality basis. One has ability, another has not. One is enterprising enough to reach for the best of everything you need, another satisfies itself with the commonplace, and change in proportion. No two stores alike. Shoppers look around and compare and decide for themselves which is most deserving of their patronage. This business has grown so great because you wanted it so just so long as we continue to consider your interests on a par with our own, and give best values, while it continues to grow. The matter of additional stocks or the nature of them is a secondary consideration. We're bound to get what you want because you want it, and to make low prices as a matter of course.
