Mr. Laurier congratulated Mr. Haverson for the way he put his case. The premier agreed that the domin ion voters lists should be used, but would not say yea or nay to deciding that there should be only one-man-one-vote. He also said that there was no other way open to the dominion that he knew of to collect the revenue which would be lost by prohibition than by adopting direct taxation. As to the question of compensation there was no immediate necessity for discussing that point. Sir Richard Cartwright endorsed what Mr. Laurier said. Justice, he said, would be done all parties.
